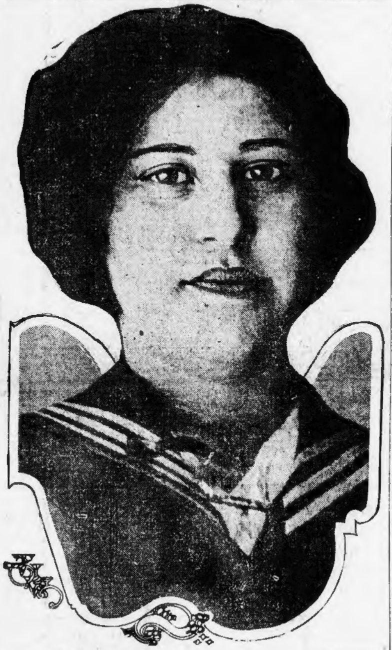
STRIKERS ROUTED BY GIRL CASHIER

SAVES SHOP FROM STRIKERS

Martha Glass, sixteen-year-old cashier in Milk street "shine" shop, who frustrated attempt of 100 strike pickets to persuade employes in bootblack controversy.



CUSTOMERS DO OWN WORK IN BARBER SHOPS

Customers took various chances in Boston barber shops today on account of the strike of the I. W. W. barbers. In some shops the workmen walked out at the sound of the strike whistle, leaving customers half-shaved, half-shampooed and with hair half-cut.

Where men with pompadours were left with one side of the head trimmed down and the other side as bristling as ever, the effect was striking.

Customers coming to "struck" shops were invited by the bosses to "help themselves," if they wished.

"The men are on strike," the boss would say, "but take a razor and shave yourself if you wish."

One could see business men scraping away at themselves, some painfully. But no one tried an amateur hair-cut.

Several hundred strikers paraded Commercial, Hanover, Washington and Summer streets, calling out workmen.

It is said that this excess was paid out for labor, but the District Attorney has begun investigation.

Mr. Higgins appeared in Lowell City Hall today and personally served notices on five city officials to appear at a Grand Jury hearing at East Cambridge courthouse tomorrow morning. The officials are Mayor James E. O'Donnell, Building Commissioner Lawrence Cummings, Finance Commissioner George E. Brown, Water and Fire Commissioner Andrew Barrett, and Street and Lighting Commissioner James E. Donnelly.

LASS OF 16 FOILS PLAN OF PICKETS

Keeps Crowd of 100 at Bay During Absence of Boss from "Shine" Parlor.

DROVE LEADER OUTDOORS.

Martha Glass, cashier at the Catelos bootblack stand at No. 6 Milk street, a blue-eyed blonde miss of sixteen, held a crowd of one hundred pickets from the Boston Bootblacks' Union at bay today and prevented any of them from coming in to talk "strike" to the Catelos boys.

All but four bootblack stands and shops had responded to the strike call issued by the Bootblacks' Union, which is affiliated with the A. F. of L. Pickets started out from strike headquarters at No. 2½ Charter street to call out the workers from these four places. The Catelos place was first on the list.

At 9 o'clock five Armenian and Italian boys were working in the Catelos place. None of them speaks English. The "boss" was out and the sixteen-year-old cashier was in temporary charge.

As the picket leader came to the door, Martha Glass ran around from the back of the counter to the door, put one firm hand on the chest of the leader and said firmly: "You can't come in." He didn't. He fell back and waited with his fellow pickets, rather nonplussed at the unexpected feminine obstacle.

Idlers Swell Throng.

The picket crowd of 100 was swelled by a throng of idlers until a mounted policeman cleared the sidewalk. Police from Court Square station then drove the crowd down through Postoffice square.

Martha Glass said later:

"Of course I wouldn't let them in unless the proprietor was here. I'm cashier and it's up to me to look after things. When I saw the strikers trying to come in to get our boys out I ran around the counter and put my hand on the chest of the leader and pushed him out."

125 Boys Return.

Meanwhile the bootblacks' strike has progressed. One hundred and twenty-five bootblacks returned to work today on a settlement effected by the union. All the boys at the North and South Stations and the Elevated stands are back.

One hundred and eighty are still on strike. Four shops where the boys have refused to come out are being picketed.

The boys were addressed at 11 o'clock today at strike headquarters by Frank H. McCarthy, New England organizer for the A. F. of L. He complimented them on the strike and urged them to be peaceful.

The boys ask a minimum weekly wage of $9, an eleven-hour day and the right to retain tips.

GIRL DUEL SECOND VANISHES

Fannie Rounds Said to Have Disappeared Day After Cambridge Case.

FATHER HINTS AT ACTION

Fannie Rounds, who acted as second for Herbert B. Larner in the latter's duel with her brother, William J. Rounds, April 16, is strangely missing from her home in Cambridge. She has been gone since the day after the duel. Larner was stabbed several times.

Mystery surrounds the girl's disappearance, for she was expected to appear as a witness in her brother's case before the Middlesex County Grand Jury which renders its verdict Friday.

Miss Beryl Grogan, a chum of the missing girl, who acted as referee of the love duel which has stirred all Cambridge, declared today:

"We all believe Fanny is not in the State. I don't know the reason why she is staying away, but I do know Fanny would have testified against her brother. She has not been home, as far as I know, since the day after her brother had the trouble with Herbert Larner, excepting once when she went home after some clothing."

The members of the Larner family would make no comment today on the strange disappearance of Fannie Rounds.

Marshall Larner, the wounded boy's father, appeared as a witness during the Grand Jury proceedings, as did Former Senator Rounds. Young Rounds accompanied his father, but did not go before the Grand Jury.

The absence of Fanny has supplanted the interest in Lillian Rounds, her sister, over whom the duel was fought.

The disappearance of the girl, who is regarded as one of the principal witnesses for the State in the case against her brother, who is held on a charge of stabbing Larner, is regarded as significant at this time, and efforts are being made to find her.

Former Senator Rounds declared today he did not know where the missing girl has gone.

The disappearance of the girl is an entirely unlooked for development.

Fanny took care of the brother after the duel and disappeared following his arraignment in the lower court.

CARS TAKE FIRE AFTER COLLISION

Several Women Among Those Seriously Injured at South Lawrence Today.

TRAIN RAN TOO FAR.

LAWRENCE, June 3.—Eighteen or more persons were injured, four seriously, and a car smashed and burned to the tracks, when two B. & M. passenger trains collided at the South Lawrence station today.

A "cab-train" running from North Lawrence to South Lawrence and a southern division train in-bound from Lowell crashed end to end at a switch, just in front of the station platform. The "cab-train" was backing, and the engine of the other train ploughed its way a third through the rear car on the "cab-train."

Instantly the car caught fire, and a few minutes later only a pile of ashes remained. The car burned like oil-soaked tinder.

One woman, Mrs. Lewis Hyde, of No. 13 Acton street, Lawrence, fell in getting off the car. Her head struck the handle on the steps, and she was knocked unconscious. BAKER CALLED WOMAN 'ANGEL,' SAYS LETTER

General Henry M. Baker, former Congressman from New Hampshire, and an executor of the estate of Mary Baker G. Eddy, referred to Mrs. Magnolia V. A. Harris as "Angel," "My Dear Girl," and "My Dear Magnolia," and used such expressions as "My devoted love is for you," in letters to her, according to the statement of Mrs. Harris' attorney, ex-Senator Henry W. Blair, in Washington today.

Dispatches from Washington quote some of the fervid letters Baker is alleged to have written, and which his administrator says he has no doubt Baker did really write. Mrs. Harris is suing Baker's estate for $200,000. Mr. Blair told something of the identity of this hitherto unheard of woman who claims to have figured so largely in the life of the prominent New Hampshire man.

Breach of Contract.

"Congressman Baker was seventy-one and Mrs. Harris is under forty," said Mr. Blair. "She does not charge breach of promise, but breach of contract. I expect the case will come up for trial next month.

"Mrs. Harris is a poor woman. She tried to come to an agreement with the estate of Baker in view of the nuptial arrangements, but to no avail. She deplores publicity, but has taken this step as the only means of getting what the Congressman intended she should have.

"Mrs. Harris is a woman of refinement, has been married, and her husband is now dead. She is an attendant at the All Souls Unitarian Church, of which the Rev. U. G. B. Pierce is pastor.

"Recently she has been employed in the pension bureau, but is not at work now."

The executors of General Baker's estate will not deny that Baker intended to marry the woman. Sherman E. Burroughs of Manchester, an administrator of the estate, said:

Do Not Deny Letters.

"I never in all my legal experience heard of any heart balm being won under such conditions. I do not think such an action will stand in law or equity. The executors of the will certainly will contest the case.

"I have no doubt that the letters are genuine and that General Baker used the endearing terms attributed to him, and that he intended to marry Mrs. Harris."

Mrs. Harris has filed copies of many letters which she says she received from General Baker.

The first letter reads:

Concord, March 9, 1912.

My Dear Magnolia:

How are you getting along? You must write to me. I shall miss you, my love, and I shall be very busy. Adieu. HENRY M. BAKER.

Letter No. 2 is as follows:

Concord, N. H., March 18, 1912.

My Dear Magnolia:

I have your letter and card. Glad to hear from you. I still have the darn bad cold. Things look like we shan't make the trip this year. We'll have everything moved up to your country home when I return.

Will bring the Dewdrop, the cross you shall have later. My love for you. HENRY M. BAKER.

The third letter says:

Concord, N. H., March 20, 1912.

My Dear Girl:

I hope to be with you forever some day. I don't know when I shall return. My devoted love to you.

Sincerely,

HENRY M. BAKER.

This is the final missive:

Concord, N. H., March 22, 1912.

My Dear Magnolia:

Don't know when I shall return. I am submerged in this political campaign. When a man reaches three score and ten he is of few words and many deeds and the deeds will all be yours before another score has passed.

My will is a very old one and a new one will have to be made. It is time enough to inform my brothers and others of my avowed intentions to my little Lady Love. "Pax Domine." HENRY M. BAKER.

"Angel," Mr. Baker wrote in one message from Concord, N. H., where he was connected with the Taft campaign bureau, "I have written to you. Have sent all mail up to date. My cough is about the same. My love is for you. Henry M. Baker."

Still another of the series of seven filed in the declaration reads:

My Dear Magnolia: I have your letters and glad to hear you are well. Will be down the first of May. Still have cold. How are you getting on. The day is not far distant when I shall call you mine. Be good. My devoted love is for you. Henry M. Baker.

The only one of the letters included in the woman's declaration which did not show marked affection, was one written through a stenographer when Baker was a patient in the hospital. This one said:

Dear Mrs. Harris: I have received your message and flowers and thank you for both. I wish you'd call and see me at the hospital now if you so desire, at such time as may be convenient for you. This letter by instruction will be signed by my stenographer. Sincerely wours, Henry M. Baker. S.

The 2,000 pupils of Somerville High School today participated in the Ivy day exercises of the senior class, numbering 397, in Central Hill park.

Henry Hadley, instructor of music, and others, left the east building for the battery, escorted by the senior class. The line was led by Miss Helen A. McCarthy, class secretary.

The class oration, on "Efficiency," was by Harlan N. Worthley. This was followed by the planting of the ivy in front of the east building by Miss Eva M. Charges "Interests" Control Underhill

In a debate in the House today, Representative Giblin of East Boston accused Representative Underhill of Somerville, chairman of the Public Lighting Committee, of being "controlled by the gas and electric light interests." The debate was on a bill providing that the price of gas in the city of Lawrence shall not exceed eighty cents. Underhill opposed the bill. The bill was substituted for an adverse committee report, however, by a vote of 48 to 20. Representatives Sanborn and Schlapp of Lawrence led the fight for the measure.

Rosenstock must take his swim or lose his degree.

COLDWELL IS HEARD IN HIS OWN DEFENCE

WORCESTER, June 3.—Joseph M. Coldwell took the stand in his own defence in his trial here today. The case went to the jury shortly after 1 o'clock, after the I. W. W. strike leader had acknowledged making the inflammatory speeches charged against him by the government witnesses during the Draper strike.

This is the first case tried in the upper courts out of the many arrests made at Hopedale and Milford. The technical charge against Coldwell is the utterance of menacing and threatening speeches. He also is charged with assault with intent to kill, in another case awaiting trial. His defence today was the mental train he labored under at the time the speeches were made.

"Draper has been looking for blood. He has got it. If there is any more shooting to be done, let it be from our side. Forget what I have said about carrying arms—forget it—forget it!" Coldwell admitted saying, after an I. W. W. strike picket, had been shot.

By an overwhelming voice vote, the House of Representatives today adopted a resolve directing the Attorney-General to investigate the so-called Ice Trust in Massachusetts, to ascertain whether there is any justification for an increase in prices. The resolve was introduced by Representative Martin Hays of Brighton.

The resolve was passed under a suspension of rules with great enthusiasm, Representative Hays declared that although prominent ice dealers earlier in the year had promised the Rules Committee of the Legislature that the price of ice would not be increased, they had already gone back on their word and increased the price from five to ten cents per hundred pounds in various parts of the State.

EVELYN THAW PHILOSOPHER; DRAWS LESSONS FROM OWN LIFE TO COUNSEL WOMEN

PARIS, June 3.—Evelyn Thaw has become a philosopher. Here are some of the tenets of her philosophy:

A pretty woman who wants work is offered love; a homely woman who wants love gets the darning.

Thousands of women seeking the philosopher's stone that would change their lives have discovered high explosives.

The greater the influence of women in affairs the better the world will be to live in.

I am too much of a philosopher, I hope, to be sorry for myself.

It is easier to be rich than to be strong; but better to be strong than to be rich.

Women can live without love, but not without being loved.

"Evelyn Thaw, Philosopher." That is the billing Paris believes Mrs. Thaw should receive when she makes her stage debut in a few days.

The girl who a few years ago startled the world with her beauty—the beauty that drove a great genius to death—has given Paris what that gay city is ready to accept as the supreme philosophy of a woman's life.

Often Find Explosives.

"A monk, seeking the philosopher's stone, found gunpowder—to his cost," Mrs. Thaw said.

"Likewise, all women seek the philosopher's stone that would change their world, and thousands of these women find, instead, high explosives.

"All women are the same in the beginning," Mrs. Thaw added. "All are seekers. Only some find what they sought—and others find—something else, that shatters their lives.

"I never excuse myself for the part I played. I should no sooner do so than would a man or woman excuse himself or herself for having been blown up with nitro-glycerin."

Mrs. Thaw has been interviewed and interviewed since she came to Paris. Every word she has said and everything she has done has been carefully and critically reported in the press here.

An interviewer, the other day, had just called upon Mrs. Pankhurst before he visited Mrs. Thaw in her attractive apartments. He mentioned Mrs. Pankhurst, and at Mrs. Thaw's smile of interest he asked:

Believes in Suffrage.

"You are a suffragist?"

She smiled.

"Why, all intelligent people believe that women should have the vote, don't they? If that constitutes a suffragist, I am one. I am not an active worker; I just believe in it. I believe that the larger the influence of women in affairs the better the world will be to live in—that is all. Women have advanced considerably even within my short recollection.

"You see it in the taste for literature; the old sugary poets are out of favor; the primrose on the river's brim means something more! Women are asking for the virile in fiction. They want Kipling and Maurice Hewlett—all the writers who touch life intimately, and who yet retain the exquisite touch of artistry.

"Yes, we have passed the megrim and Tennyson stage of life, and we have come to a more robust and a healthier period."

Mrs. Thaw told of her childhood, before she went to New York, and of the days when she was trying to find an opening on the stage. She said:

"I thank God my childhood was free from all stress. I was supremely happy. I lived in a country town, and my interest lay in the garden. There was absolutely no cloud on my horizon.

"I was fifteen years old when I went on the stage, and I was a child in thought and in experience. I remember standing at the wings in one production in which I appeared, watching a sextette of chorus girls, beautiful to behold, and a-smother with diamonds, and regretting that I was not tall enough to be one of them. I never for a moment thought that they were not the highest paid girls on the stage, and it was a shock to me to learn that they were only earning $25 a week.

"I was in that stage of life when I loved everybody. I never had a hard thought; there wasn't a man or woman on the stage, or, indeed, in life, for whom I would not have done anything in the world."

Seeks New Career.

The interviewer asked her to tell him of her husband—Harry Thaw. She replied with spirit:

"As to Mr. Thaw, I have nothing to say. I am satisfied that at moments he was quite mad. I have nothing but sorrow for him. I am too much of a philosopher, I hope, to be sorry for myself.

"I am now going to begin a new career. I begin fair to this extent; I am fortified by knowledge. A pretty woman who wants work is offered love, and a plain woman who wants love gets the darning. I am strong enough now to take what I want.

"I have found this in life—that it is easier to be rich than strong, and better to be strong than to be rich.

"Women can live without love, but not without being loved, and I love Pompom."

LITTLE CHILD ALONE TEACHES TRUE LOVE, SAYS EVELYN THAW

A child is a terrible happiness. He reopens the avenues of terror. I am going back to the stage for his sake, and I am going to succeed for his sake.

Some women spell "Love" with a capital and some with a small letter. There was a time when I felt like drawing a line underneath—just as one does with any foreign word—but you only begin to know how beautiful a word it is when you have a little child of your own to love.—Evelyn Thaw in Paris interview.

Higher Prices for Meat Are Expected

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The demand for beef far exceeds the supply, and high prices are the result, says a bulletin issued today by the Department of Agriculture. The shortage in the supply of meat-producing animals, too, is steadily becoming greater, and the country is warned that it is facing a period of short production of meat.

SCOTT AND GIRL TRIED 5 TIMES TO GET LICENSE

Pretty sixteen-year-old Ethel Howe, the Malden High School girl, and Earl W. Scott, the Phillips Exeter Academy student with whom she braved starvation in a sensational elopement, tried five times to wed, but each time failed, according to a statement made by a member of the Howe family today.

Up to today there has been much speculation as to whether the young couple on their long journey to Lewiston, Pa., were able to secure a license and a minister to marry them. Today it was stated that each time the young elopers tried they were refused because of their tender years.

Young Scott and little Miss Howe tried to get a license in a small town just outside Worcester, again in Providence, the third time in New York, the fourth in Germantown, Pa., and the fifth time near Harrisburgh, Pa.

The daughter of the general freight agent of the Seaboard Air line was at her home today, but all visitors were denied her.

Young Scott is still held at Lewiston, Pa., where the elopers were intercepted by the girl's father. Scott is charged with the larceny of an automobile and groceries, which, it is alleged, he took when he got out of funds.

Mrs. Arthur Scott of No. 446 Salem street, Malden, mother of the boy eloper, today placed the blame of her son's runaway on her husband, from whom she is separated, and on a wealthy Boston banker who befriended the youth. She said:

"A Boston banker hired Earl to drive his automobile not long ago. He used to take Earl around to the exclusive clubs and introduce him as a Tech student. He set the pace for Earl and Earl hadn't money enough to keep it up."

Pichon Heads Balkan Board.

PARIS, June 3.—M. Pichon, French Foreign Minister, was today chosen chairman of the International Commission, which will settle the financial issues arising from the Balkan war.

Lonely Prisoner Suicide in Cell

Was to Be Released Soon, but Had Nothing to Do and Nowhere to Go.

CONCORD, N. H., June 3.—Because he had nowhere to go and nothing to do after his approaching release, Arthur Norrington, a prisoner at the State prison here, hanged himself with his own suspenders today.

Since he came here in 1910 for from five to seven years, Norrington had received only one visitor and only two letters. Good behavior was shortening his term.

Last Sunday he told Chaplain Bassett that he was lonesome—had no plans as to where he would go after his release, and nothing to do.

At 6 a. m. today he had breakfast as usual. At 6:40 an officer passed his cell and found him all right. He was found dead at 6:55.

Arabic Sails With Big Tourist List

The White Star liner Arabic sailed from Charlestown today for Liverpool and Queenstown with the largest number of tourists that have sailed from Boston this season. There were 310 cabin and 219 steerage passengers on the ship, nearly three-quarters of whom were women. Among those sailing were Rev. Father John D. Tierney, pastor of St. Catherine's Church, Charlestown; Professor B. O. Pierce of Harvard, Mrs. Pierce, Miss Emily Pierce and Miss Jessie Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hoar and Mrs. Adeline F. Storrs of Brookline, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Stover and children, Mrs. M. Osgood Whitcomb and Misses Marian and Edith Whitcomb, Mrs. G. S. Winslow and Misses Anna, Elenora and Katherine Winslow.

Draper "Breakers" and Strikers Fight

MILFORD, June 9.—Stones and clubs were freely used and dirks and revolvers drawn in a battle between twenty-five strike-breakers and fifty strikers from the Hopedale plant of the Draper company early today. The fight occurred in the Draper model tenements on Prospect Heights, known as the "brick city," and was ended only by the rushing of half a hundred special policemen to the scene.

MRS. R. H. BOUTWELL, who is on her honeymoon. Mrs. Boutwell was Miss Marion Allen Hood.

Picture by Litchfield Studio, Arlington.

Marion Allen Hood and Roland Hill Boutwell were married at the Prospect Hill Congregational Church, and are on their honeymoon today. They kept their destination a secret from their friends.

Mrs. Boutwell is the daughter of Charles H. Hood, of H. P. Hood & Sons, and Mr. Boutwell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rowell Murray Boutwell of No. 300 Newbury street, Boston.

PEACE NEAR AT GOVERNOR'S BLOWER SHOP

An immediate settlement of the strike of the 1,450 employes at the Hyde Park plants of the Sturtevant Blower Works and the Becker Milling Machine Company, both controlled by Governor Foss, was meditated today.

Eight strikers called on the Governor at the State House. The party were soon joined by Joseph Weeks, treasurer of the Sturtevant works, and President Moriarty of the Boston Central Labor Union.

After the conference, the report of a settlement spread.

The strikers' committee was made up as follows: John Gramm, H. L. Stanley, John Melse, T. F. McGowan, James Daniels, E. J. Carroll and J. V. Purdy.

On leaving the State House the committee adjourned to the Quincy House to prepare a statement.

Pretty Hands and Arms for Every Woman

A bath for beautifying hands and arms is meeting with great favor because of its simplicity and the astonishing results following its use. The hands and arms are first washed and dried, then bathed for a few minutes in a quart of warm water, to which has been added a scant teaspoonful pulverized eumol. This should be allowed to dry slowly on the skin.

This beauty-bath used night and morning banishes the red, rough, ugly condition of the skin and eliminates tan, freckles, "water marks" and other blemishes, and gives to it a clear, white and soft, velvety texture, with a lovely tint and shell-like transparency. Pulverized eumol comes in original 4-ounce packages and costs but little. Care should be used not to buy it in bulk, because of possible impurity.

'FRESNO' MUST RECEIVE HALF, SAYS COUNSEL

William C. Russell, son of the late Daniel Russell of Melrose, stands today legally bound to share the estate, so long in dispute, with Fresno Dan Russell, according to Attorney Robert Nason, counsel for the estate.

Attorney Nason, who today resumed his arguments before Master Pevey on the second hearing of the contest Dakota Dan has waged since the Summer of 1909, insisted that William C. Russell had been sincere and disinterested in all his actions in connection with the case.

In speaking of the request in the Melrose man's will, that the missing Russell son share in the estate if he appeared within a specified time, Attorney Nason declared:

> William C. Russell stands before the Court now legally bound to share the estate with Fresno Dan, his brother. This fact in itself disproves the charge that the production of Fresno Dan was a plant. It eliminates the idea that William C. Russell wanted to hold the entire estate of his father.

HOW I MADE MY HAIR GROW

Woman With Marvelously Beautiful Hair Gives Simple Home Prescription Which She Used With Most Remarkable Results.

I was greatly troubled with dandruff and falling hair. I tried many advertised hair preparations and various prescriptions, but they all signally failed; many of them made my hair greasy, so it was impossible to comb it or do it up properly. I think that many of the things I tried were positively injurious and from my own experience I cannot too strongly caution you against using preparations containing wood alcohol and other poisonous substances. I believe they injure the roots of the hair. After my long list of failures, I finally found a simple prescription which I can unhesitatingly state is beyond doubt the most wonderful thing for the hair I have ever seen. Many of my friends have also used it, and obtained wonderful effects therefrom. It not only is a powerful stimulant to the growth of the hair and for restoring gray hair to its natural color, but it is equally good for removing dandruff, giving the hair life and brilliancy, etc., and for the purpose of keeping the scalp in first-class condition. It also makes the hair easier to comb and arrange in nice form. I have a friend who used it two months and during that time it has not only stopped the falling of his hair and wonderfully increased its growth, but it practically restored all of his hair to its natural color. You can obtain the ingredients for making this wonderful preparation from almost any druggist. The prescription is as follows: Bay Rum, 6 oz.; Menthol Crystals, ½ drachm; Lavona de Composee, 2 ozs. If you like it perfumed add a few drops of To-Kalon Perfume, which mixes perfectly with the other ingredients. This, however, is not necessary. Apply night and morning; rub thoroughly into the scalp.

MOST DRUGGISTS now carry in stock, already mixed and ready for immediate use, this wonderful hair tonic. It's labelled "LAVONA COMPOUND." The mixing is done at the laboratories in New York, Paris and London, which for years have supplied druggists with Lavona de Composee. Ask your druggist for LAVONA COMPOUND and you will get a tonic identical with that which you would have if you were to buy the ingredients and mix them yourself according to the original celebrated formula given above. LAVONA COMPOUND is sold on the Satisfaction-Guaranteed-or-Money-Back Plan.

RESINOL HEALS ITCHING ECZEMA

Don't stand that itching eczema torment one day longer. Go to the nearest druggist and get a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap. Bathe the eczema patches with Resinol Soap and hot water, dry, and apply a little Resinol Ointment. The torturing, itching and burning stop instantly, you no longer have to dig and scratch, sleep becomes possible, and healing begins. Soon the ugly, tormenting eruptions disappear completely and for good.

Resinol is not an experiment. It is a doctor's prescription which proved so wonderfully successful for skin troubles that it has been used by other doctors all over the country for eighteen years. No other treatment for the skin now before the public can show such a record of professional approval. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but you can test them at our expense. Just write to Dept. 41-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., and we will send you a generous trial by parcel post.

Denies Lagerquist Estate Conservator

Judge's Decision Favors Woman Who Oft Sought Divorce.

Mrs. Lusea M. Lagerquist of Cambridge, fifty-seven, who has five times unsuccessfully sued her husband, Erik, seventy-two, for divorce, was the winner in a decision handed down by Judge Charles J. McIntire at Cambridge today, when he decided that he would not appoint a conservator of her extensive real estate holdings in Cambridge.

Mrs. Lagerquist was the defendant in the action brought by her two daughters, Mrs. Alerie S. Nelson of Somerville, and Miss Josephine E. Lagerquist of Dorchester, the latter editor of the Textile Review, alleging that Mrs. Lagerquist drank, and asking that a conservator be appointed to take charge of her property.

Mrs. Lagerquist at the latest of her divorce hearings alleged that her husband had not contributed a cent to her support in more than thirty-five years. She said that her husband had opened the blinds when she wanted them closed, and had sworn at her, also awakening her in the middle of the night, making her very nervous.

CLEVELAND, June 3.—Five hundred girls, pupils in the eighth grade of the Cleveland public schools, have been given real live babies to experiment upon in a practical study of infant hygiene. The initiation of the course took place at the Sterling School, where Edward Parsch, eight months old, was given a hygienic bath before an interested class of girls in short dresses.

Maniac Entombs 3 Children in Sand

The Home Beauty Parlor

By Betty Dean

Mattie: I cannot praise any one kind of soap; there are many good ones.

Adela: You are right in being "finicky" about your hair; it is for just such particular people as you that I always recommend canthrox. Its use will cure dandruff and make your "straight, oily" locks full of vitality and fluffiness—much more attractive than artificial curling. Make this shampoo at home by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. It is the most pleasing and effective shampoo I have ever tried.

Patricia: If ordinary face powders merely look artificial and fail to give lasting improvement, let me recommend a splendid liquid powder that you can easily prepare at home. You will find a great change in the length of time this preparation stays on. It seems a part of the skin. Dissolve 4 ounces of spurmax in half a pint of hot water, add 2 teaspoonfuls of glycerine, let stand until cold, then cork tightly. This will not only give you a firm, healthy skin, but it is extremely beautifying, and entirely harmless.

Anne M.: Your rebellion against the "fat-and-forty" idea meets with my hearty approval. I have often advised against the carelessness which allows so many women to lose the figure while yet young and it is so unnecessary. Just get 4 ounces of parnotis, dissolve it in 1½ pints of hot water, strain it, and take a tablespoonful three times daily. It reduces weight slowly enough to permit a gradual tightening of the skin so there is no danger of sagging muscles and loose tissues. Exercise mildly and bathe often, but the treatment requires no vigorous diet.

Alice M.: The eye-trouble you describe, like most eye troubles, is caused by neglect. Get an ounce of crystos at any drug store and dissolve it in a pint of water. Put two or three drops daily in each eye. You will be amazed to note how the tonic will brighten and beautify your eyes and add youthful clearness. It will not smart, or burn, and will doubtless save you all further weakness.

Hattie L.: You are rather young to worry about losing your good looks, but you are wise, however, in taking every precaution against the loss of your complexion and the coming of premature wrinkles. Keep the skin firm and the complexion clear with a nightly application, using this simple, inexpensive preparation. Mix together an ounce of almozoin, two teaspoonfuls glycerine and ½ pint cold water. Stir and let stand a few hours. This will give a healthy resistance to oily conditions of skin. Try this faithfully for awhile, and note how it encourages the natural contour without undue flesh. Many have found in it a return to skin-health.

T. Y. T.: Indeed, dandruff is an unsightly thing, besides preventing the growth and beauty of the hair. Most of the "dope" on the market is, as you say, helpless to cure the trouble. I am certain you can do wonders to beautify your hair and get relief from that itching scalp by the use of this tonic which you, yourself, can prepare. In ½ pint alcohol dissolve one ounce quinzoin. Add ½ pint water and rub well into the scalp. While at the drug store for quinzoin also get some canthrox for shampooing.

Mrs. McD.: Your "dragged-out" feeling is probably only due to lack of strength and all you need is a good tonic to brace you up. Here is an old-fashioned remedy which will not only make you feel better but make you look better. Dissolve half a cup of sugar and one ounce kardene in half a pint of alcohol, adding sufficient pure water to make a full quart of the mixture. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. This will insure proper digestion, an active liver, free elimination and by cleaning out the blood will clear your skin and brighten your eyes.

Coming 13,000 Miles to Buy Trousseau

Mrs. Paul Withington's Sister on Her Way to Boston.

Miss Margaret Restarick of Honolulu, sister of Mrs. Paul Withington of Cambridge, is on her way to Boston on the longest trip ever taken to buy a trousseau. She comes 13,000 miles to spend the Summer with her sister here, and buy her trousseau, before returning to Honolulu to be married in the Fall.

Miss Restarick is the daughter of Bishop and Mrs. H. B. Restarick of Honolulu, and her mother accompanies her on this trip to Boston. Within the year she will marry Reynold McGrew, a Honolulu business man and the grandson of John McGrew, called the "Father of Annexation" in the island. McGrew was educated in France.

Miss Restarick's sister, Miss Constance Restarick, married Paul Withington, the remarkable Harvard athlete. Mr. Withington's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Withington, and his brothers, David and Bennett, are on their way to Boston with Mrs. and Miss Restarick, and all will spend the Summer with the Withingtons here.

ONE IS BURNED, ONE MISSING IN IPSWICH FIRE

Walter Miller, thirty, is believed to have lost his life, and Henry Southern, thirty-three, was seriously burned in a fire early today which destroyed the $20,000 barn at Ipswich on the Summer estate of James H. Proctor of No. 273 Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay, prominent leather merchant and director in the former Eliot National Bank. Twenty horses were saved.

A. H. Smith, a coachman, lives in the barn with his wife and two children. He rescued them with difficulty as thick smoke blocked all ways of exit.

Southern admits entertaining, with Miller, two male friends, whose names are not known, last night.

Prof. Swain Elected Transit Board Head

Eminent Harvard Engineer Succeeds George G. Crocker.

Professor George F. Swain of the Boston Transit Commission was today elected chairman of that body, succeeding the late George G. Crocker. The other members of the commission are Horace G. Allen, Josiah Quincy and James B. Noyes. Governor Foss will shortly send to his council the name of an appointee to fill the vacancy. Professor Swain is head of the engineering department at Harvard.

Austin Last of Poet Laureates

LONDON, June 3.—The late Alfred Austin will have the honor of being England's last poet laureate. It was said today that King George considers the post of poet laureate about as obsolete as that of court jester, and that he will name no successor to Austin.

FIFTY BOATS ARE BURNED BY SUFFRAGETTES

LONDON, June 3.—Militant suffragettes set fire to the Longbridge boat club early today, destroyed the clubhouse and fifty boats. Most of the boats were of special design, having been manufactured by Fred Pough, the famous boat builder of Oxford. The damage is estimated at about $5,000.

Mrs. Flora (General) Drummond, the famous militant leader and lieutenant of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who was operated upon yesterday for an illness induced by a hunger strike, was reported improved today.

RE-ORGANIZATION

About two years ago there was established as an experiment at Boston, under the title of the Lynn & Brockton Shoe Market, a retail outlet for the sale of surplus stocks from some of the best manufacturers of those cities, stocks having accumulated through overproduction, countermanded orders, failures of retailers, balances of consignments, etc., etc. It was arranged to sell these shoes at the lowest possible prices.

The experiment, while not profitable from a financial point of view, was such a big success as an outlet proposition, that it attracted the notice of big shoe manufacturers of Manchester, Salem and Haverhill. Arrangements have been made to dispose of surplus stocks from these cities at the already established outlet of the Lynn and Brockton shoe markets.

To do this it will be necessary to reorganize the market. Such reorganization necessitates the immediate disposal of all stocks now at the market place at 568 Washington Street, Boston. This stock contains all the 1913 models in fashionable footwear for men, women and children, and will be sold at about 1-3 original cut price. Sale starts at 9 a. m. Tomorrow, Wednesday.

To facilitate reorganization a quick sale is agreed upon and each of the parties interested agree to stand an equal percentage of loss occasioned by the hurried sale. Signed, J. W. ROSS,
Sec'y of Lynn and Brockton Shoe Market.

ONE KILLED AS FUNERAL TRAIN HITS FREIGHT

Official report given out by the New Haven Railroad today cleared up details of the wreck at North Kent, Ct., where Dr. Charles H. McBurney's funeral special, returning from Stockbridge, was in fatal head-on collision with a milk train.

Thomas Weldon of Stamford, Ct., fireman on the special, was killed.

William Rigby of Harrison, Ct., engineer of the special, was seriously, maybe fatally, hurt. He is in Danbury (Ct.) Hospital.

The special left New York yesterday afternoon for Stockbridge with the body of Mrs Margaret W. McBurney, wife of the famous New York physician, for Stockbridge. Dr. McBurney and others of the funeral party and Edwin Lindsay, a New York undertaker's assistant, were in the Pullman car Edgemere. In a coach ahead was the body.

The special arrived at Stockbridge at 6 o'clock and was soon started back to New York. The only ones going back were Undertaker Lindsay and the train crew.

Boston Leading for Piano Convention

CLEVELAND, June 3.—The National Piano Merchants' Association of America held the centre of the stage today in the assemblage here of piano men from all over the country. Boston is leading for the 1914 convention. The piano men objected to the feature of the new tariff jected to the feature of the new tariff bill, which classes pianos as a luxury. They also object to the 20 per cent. duty on ivory, which will increase the cost of piano keys.

Deport Mother But Retain Her Baby

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Pressure of routine business has so far prevented Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor from taking up complaints against the Immigration Bureau at New York, in which Congressman Curley of Massachusetts is interested. Some cases he characterizes as inhuman. Senator O'Gorman in a complaint filed today cites the "most outrageous" case brought to his attention. A young unmarried woman gave birth to a child upon her arrival. She was deported and the child was held.

Cattle and Wheat to Be on Free List

Nelson Has Agreed to Removal of Duties, Says Simmons.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The free list of the Underwood tariff bill will be augmented further by the addition of cattle and wheat, according to a statement of Senator Simmons of North Carolina after a conference with President Wilson today.

It had been stated previously that the President was opposed to the inclusion of these articles in the free list, but Senator Simmons said today that the chief executive had signified his willingness to have the duties removed. Senator Simmons prophesied that the bill would be reported out of committee by the latter part of this week, or at least, by the first of next. The measure will be reported to the caucus within the next fortnight, the senator added, and then the real battle will begin.

Strikebreakers at Bemis on Strike

A case in which strike-breakers themselves went on strike has developed at the Aetna Woolen Mills, Bemis. Twelve weeks ago, 150 weavers then employed in those mills demanded better conditions and struck. The mills imported strike-breakers to work on a daily wage. The company found that this was too costly and tried to introduce piecework pay, with the result that the thirty-five strike-breaking weavers walked out on strike.

Fund for Harvard Military Training

The Harvard students who are to go this year into military training camps have made extensive plans for the Summer's work. A fund to pay the expenses of some of the students who are to do this has been established, and it is hoped that this will attract more college men, especially from Harvard, to go into military training as a vacation recreation.

It is expected that every boilermaker in the State will be out by Thursday morning.

U. S. Board Takes Up Rate Increase

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today began consideration of the petition of the fifty-two eastern railroads operating north of the Potomac and Ohio and east of the Mississippi rivers for a 5 per cent. increase in freight rates. Two years ago the commission denied the carriers an increase in rates due to inflated capitalization.

FIND TAXI SLIP IS DATED YEAR BEFORE 'PLANT'

Juror John H. Enos of No. 370 Le Grange street, Roxbury, created a surprise in court in the Wood-Atteaux-Collins trial today when he discovered that the trip slip presented as the record fo Arthur Pira's taxicab drive, when he took a man who "resembled Atteaux," to the point where John J. Breen says Atteaux paid him $500, was dated in 1911, in stead of 1912—a year before the alleged meeting between Atteaux and Breen occurred.

A messenger was sent to the Taxi Service Company's office to find whether the date was correct as 1911, or was an error and should have been 1912.

Arthur Pira was cross-examined when court opened today.

The State expects to rest its case today. The defence will put on about twenty-five witnesses. William M. Wood, Frederick E. Atteaux and Dennis J. Collins are charged with conspiracy to "plant" dynamite in Lawrence during the strike there.

Daniel H. Coakley, counsel for Atteaux, cross-examined Pira today.

Under examination, Pira testified that the reason that he remembered so vividly taking the man that "resembled Atteaux" from the home of President Wood at No. 21 Fairfield street to the corner of Franklin and Washington streets, and then to Allston's saloon on Court street on January 19, 1912, was the fact that he came from Wood's house.

"Most of the calls from Mr. Wood's home were short jobs," testified Pira. "I thought it queer that my passenger should have me stop at Franklin and Washington streets, and that a man of his type should go into a barroom in Court street.

"I also thought it queer that he should have me go back to Franklin and Washington streets again to meet and talk with the same man that he met when we first met at this corner before going to the barroom."

Harvard Seniors Light Fund Grows

One hundred and fifty dollars more is the sum the Harvard dormitory committee is endeavoring to raise, in order to finance the placing of electric lights in Harvard senior buildings. The subscriptions have been collected from the junior and sophomore classes now in Harvard, as those will be the next two classes to occupy the dormitories. Twelve hundred dollars was needed to put the plan through. The sophomore class is expected to pledge the remaining hundred and fifty dollars.

HARVARD MAN PLAYS ROLE AT PARK THEATRE

It was Harvard Night at the Park Theatre last evening, with Ralph Bunker, one of the best little actors in the big institution in Cambridge, becoming a professional for a single performance of "The Blindness of Virtue." The surprise of the evening, perhaps, was that Mr. Bunker turned to his task with the manner of a well trained professional. He was not the usual college amateur by any means.

The appearance of Mr. Bunker in the role of the Honorable Archibald Graham must have taught William Morris, who presents the play, that loud clothes and the classics are not all that is thrown out upon the world at Harvard. Among other things it raises young men with promising dramatic talent.

Just what Mr. Morris had on his mind when he promised to give the best equipped Harvard man a chance to appear in an important juvenile role of "The Blindness of Virtue" is not exactly clear, but it is pretty certain that he was not disappointed at last evening's showing. In fact, the competitive reading of the role by a dozen students confirmed his suspicions that Harvard does possess real actors. The contest was so keen that the privilege of playing the role was bestowed upon two young men, and Mr. Bunker led off last evening. He finished with a clean score.

With only a week's preparation to sustain him, Mr. Bunker was as easy in his work as a veteran. He had looks, manner and elocutionary skill. If his hundred or so friends who occupied the centre of the orchestra embarrassed him he didn't show it, and there was not a moment when he was not complete master of the situation. Neither Harvard nor Mr. Morris could find anything to regret in Mr. Bunker's performance.

Watson White, another ambitious young student, will play the same role tomorrow evening.

Globe Theatre.

The new bill at the Globe Theatre yesterday was headed by La Petite Ouri, a charming and graceful young woman who made an instantaneous hit with the day's audiences. There were ten other features including new motion pictures and the Pathe weekly.

Gaiety Theatre.

"Oliver Twist," in motion picture form, with Nat Goodwin appearing in the role of Fagin, was the principal feature of the new program at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday. The picture was a splendid example of the motion photographer's art. Other interesting pictures were exhibited.

Orpheum Theatre.

Adelaide Hermann astonished everybody at yesterday's performance at the Orpheum Theatre with her skillful and interesting magic. There were a dozen other features on the bill.

St. James Theatre.

A new tabloid musical comedy, "The Maid of Nicobar," was featured in the new bill at the St. James Theatre yesterday. Other vaudeville and picture numbers made up the long program.

Bowdoin Sq. Theatre.

Violet Mascotte's "Merry Maids" returned to the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday and contributed some lively entertainment.

John Craig Appears in "Julius Caesar"

Castle Square Players Attract Large Audience at Classic Play.

Even the approach of Summer does not tire Boston people of Shakespeare. This fact was attested by the audience which greeted John Craig and the Castle Square Theatre players in the production of "Julius Caesar" last night, just after two weeks of Sothern and Marlowe.

It was a fine performance of this old classic. In the manner in which the players read their lines, and in the costumes and scenic investiture the production left nothing to be desired.

William P. Carleton was Brutus, Mr. Craig Marc Antony, Donald Meek was Cassius and George Ernst was Caesar. Freddie Ormonde was Casca. Miss Laurett Browne was Portia, Brutus' wife, and Miss Florence Shirley was Lucius. Besides these in the cast were Al Roberts as the First Citizen, Hubert Wilke as Decius, Henry Hall as the soothsayer, Alfred Lunt as Trebonius and others.

In the program Mr. Craig prints this week a reproduction of the program of Winter Garden, New York, for Friday evening, November 25, 1864, when the three sons of the great Booth, Junius Brutus, Edwin and John Wilkes, appeared in "Julius Caesar" for the benefit of a fund to raise a statue to Shakespeare in Central Park.

The scenery and costumes of last night's performance were from original designs by Livingston Platt.

Howard Athenaeum.

The big show at the Old Howard last evening was a benefit performance for the employes of the theatre. It was a success of large dimensions.

Scenic Temple.

New pictures and vaudeville features were included in the change of program at the Scenic Temple yesterday. Leona Howe's orchestra was also heard.

Paragon Park.

The opening days of Paragon Park sent many thousands of pleasure seekers to Nantasket Beach. The many free attractions at Paragon, including the sensational cabaret in the Palm Garden, have a tendency to give Manager Dodge's recreation grounds persistent popularity.

Lexington Park.

There was a new vaudeville bill in the theatre at Lexington Park yesterday. Besides this splendid attraction there is also a dancing pavilion, restaurant and big athletic field suitable for games. Lexington Park is proving itself an ideal spot for picnics.

Norumbega Park.

Norumbega Park is safely launched upon its new season. A new vaudeville program was given in the open air theatre yesterday, which was made up of attractive numbers. The many other features at Norumbega are drawing thousands of recreationists to its beautiful grounds every day.

MISS GORDON IN 'DIVORCONS' AT THE PLYMOUTH

Miss Eleanor Gordon, one of the most popular leading women ever associated with Boston stock companies, appears at the Plymouth Theatre this week as star and producing manager of a Summer stock company that is far above the ordinary.

Miss Gordon's initial production was Victorien Sardou's "Divorcons." Judging from this first of a series of plays to be produced in succeeding weeks, Miss Gordon has surrounded herself with a company of excellent promise bent on giving performances of a higher artistic grade than is commonly expected from Summer stock companies.

In a brief curtain talk Miss Gordon summed up her aims in these few words: "I am in debt to my manager, E. J. Carpenter, for bringing me here. I thank the public of Boston for wanting me. And I shall try to please you all."

Prominent among the other members of Miss Gordon's company are Mrs. George A. Hibbard, Elizabeth Rathburn, Ida Jeffries Goodfriend, Rosamond Carpenter, Francesca Rotoli, Cordelia McDonald, Lauretta Hoadley, Wright Kramer, Edward Langford, Frederick Burt, Roland Rushton and Alfred Smith.

Bass Point.

The Bass Point and Nahant season is now moving serenely forward with the Nahant line of steamboats carrying thousands of tourists down the harbor every day. Besides the hotels, which are famous for their shore dinners, Bass Point has a splendidly equipped midway and many free attractions.

Plays that Remain.

"The Gentleman from No. 19" continues at the Tremont. It is a French farce on familiar but funny lines.

"The Old Homestead" began its fourth week at the Boston Theatre last evening. It is a rural drama with pleasant memories.

"Sweethearts," with Christie Macdonald, is now on its final week at the Colonial Theatre.

Next Week's Bills.

"The Three Musketeers" will be given by Mr. Craig's company at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

"The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" will be the attraction at the Plymouth Theatre next week. Miss Eleanor Gordon will, of course, have the title role, and Mrs. George A. Hibbard will be seen as Mrs. Cortylon.

Many Star Acts on Bill at B. F. Keith's

Valerie Bergere Charming in a Japanese Sketch.

A brand-new stage German, a brand-new kind of comedy stunt, Valerie Bergere as a "Japanese Wife," Ethel Green and Neptune's Living Statues, are only a few of the headliners that fill Keith's bill this week.

The new stage German is Eckert, of the Eckert and Francis team. Who ever saw a stage German in a dress suit? Here's one, and he's funnier than the old kind in baggy trousers, too. The new comedy stunt is "Off and On"—sequel to "On and Off."

Valerie Bergere is charming in a delightful little Japanese piece that is warranted to make you laugh till you cry—right at the very end—and then laugh again. Ethel Green is billed as "Vaudeville's Daintiest Comedienne." She does two things that are remarkable—shows that the old fashioned frilled skirts of the days of the rebellion can be becoming—and shows that the old songs are prettier than the new.

Neptune's Statues are familiar to most Boston people already. Those who haven't seen them must see them this week, for they go Saturday night.

The Kratons, Ronair and Ward, and Billy McDermott round out a remarkable bill.

WOMAN LOBBIES TO SAVE STATE HEALTH BOARD

Here's a new one for Massachusetts. A woman lobbyist.

Her name is Mrs. Francis B. Harrington of No. 201 Beacon street, Back Bay.

Dr. Harrington, her husband, is a surgeon at the Massachusetts General Hospital. Dr. Walcott, chairman of the State Board of Health, is her husband's boss. There's a vacancy. Dr. Harrington wants the promotion.

Mrs. Harrington doesn't frequent the lobby of the State House.

Instead, she writes letters to legislators to change their votes.

She is trying to change the votes of legislators who want a reorganization of the State Board of Health.

Mrs. Harrington asked legislators to help save Dr. Mark W. Richardson, the present secretary, in his $5,000 job. His Summer home is near her husband's in Ipswich. He goes there daily when he has finished his work for the life insurance company which pays him $8,000 to $10,000 a year in fees.

Mrs. Harrington's maiden name was Josephine Ruggles. One of the famous old Ruggles family. Ruggles street, Roxbury, is named after them. The Harringtons and the Richardsons are great friends, and have been for years.

The AMERICAN called Mrs. Harrington on the phone at Ipswich.

Here was the conversation:

"Mrs. Harrington, why are you so interested in defeating the bill backed by the AMERICAN, for the reorganization of the State Board of Health?"

"I haven't read any of the AMERICAN's charges of inefficiency against the board. I just believe they are honorable men."

"Friends for Years."

"But the AMERICAN isn't passing judgment on their honor, Mrs. Harrington. It's leaving that to the Legislature."

"Well, I've known Dr. Richardson since he was a boy. I knew his brother, Maurice. Our families have been friends for years. He lives near me here at Ipswich during the Summer. Men like Drs. Walcott, Richardson and Rosenau are hard to replace. I believe the Legislature ought to go slow."

"But, Mrs. Harrington, it has gone slow. It's given the State Board of Health thirty years to do something. It hasn't done it, and the AMERICAN thinks the board ought to be reorganized."

"Well, Dr. Richardson and Dr. Walcott are honorable gentlemen. I have known them both for years. I don't know what you charge against them, but I don't believe they ought to be removed. No, I am not a relative of Dr. Richardson's. I have known him for years. I just wrote the legislators I thought they ought to keep Dr. Ricardson in office."

When Mrs. Harrington wrote legislators on some of her expensive, embossed stationery, to keep Dr. Richardson in his job, she didn't perhaps know these things:

That Dr. Richardson is so busy with his life insurance work he hasn't time to do his work as secretary.

That he leaves this to Dr. W. T. Hanson, his assistant, the man of whom it is declared "he never wrote a prescription, never practiced his profession."

That Dr. Walcott created the Metropolitan Water Board, which paid $203,000 to water companies part owned by his fellow-member, the venerable Hiram F. Mills.

That Dr. Hanson wouldn't investigate the death of little Laura McAllister last Thursday, who died from eating poison her mother bought at a drug store.

That unless there was a live District Attorney in Suffolk County, Mr. Pelletier, your child could be killed the same way today.

Dr. Leary, the medical examiner, said: "I don't know if there is any criminal law to reach the parties who prepare such medicine without inscribing the contents on the package. I do know we should have a change pretty quick and such a law made."

"The State Board of Health has nothing to do with such cases," Dr. Hanson told the AMERICAN.

Finds Three Laws.

An AMERICAN reporter, inside of five minutes, found three laws giving Dr. Hanson and the Board of Health plenty of power to act.

But seven-year-old Laura McAllister died on Durham street.

It's pretty hard to sit on a sea-cooled veranda at Ipswich and be bothered about the death of a little girl not "in our set."

WITHIN THE LAW ☘ By Marvin Dana, from the Play of Bernard Veiller

PART I.

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly Company. The play "Within the Law" is copyrighted by Mr. Veiller and this novelization of it is published by his permission. The American Play Company is the sole proprietor of the exclusive rights of the representation and performance of "Within the Law" in all languages.

"HELLO, Aggie!" the detective remarked, with a smirk, while the Inspector stared from one to the other with rounded eyes of wonder, and his jaw dropped from the stark surprise of this new development.

The girl returned deliberately to the chair she had occupied through the interview with the Inspector, and dropped into it weakly. Her form rested there limply now, and the blue eyes stared disconsolately at the blank wall before her. She realized that fate had decreed defeat for her in the game. It was after a minute of silence in which the two men sat staring that at last she spoke with a savage wrath against the pit into which she had fallen after her arduous efforts.

"Ain't that the damnedest luck!"

For a little interval still, Burke turned his glances from the girl to Cassidy, and then back again to the girl, who sat immobile with her blue eyes steadfastly fixed on the wall. The police official was, in truth, totally bewildered. Here was inexplicable mystery. Finally, he addressed the detective curtly.

"Cassidy, do you know this woman?"

"Sure, I do!" came the placid answer. He went on to explain with the direct brevity of his kind. "She's little Aggie Lynch—con' woman, from Buffalo—two years for blackmail—did her time at Burnsing."

"You're a Beaut!"

With this succinct narrative concerning the girl who sat mute and motionless in the chair with her eyes fast on the wall, Cassidy relapsed into silence, during which he stared rather perplexedly at his chief, who seemed to be in the throes of unusual emotion. As the detective expressed it in his own vernacular: For the first time in his experience the Inspector appeared to be actually "rattled."

For a little time there was silence, the while Burke sat staring at the averted face of the girl. His expression was that of one who has just undergone a soul-stirring shock. Then, presently, he set his features grimly, rose from his chair and walked to a position directly in the front of the girl, who still refused to look in his direction.

"Young woman——" he began, severely. Then, of a sudden he laughed. "You picked the right business, all right, all right!" he said, with a certain enthusiasm. He laughed aloud until his eyes were only slits, and his ample paunch trembled vehemently.

"Well," he went on, at last, "I certainly have to hand it to you, kid. You're a beaut'!"

Aggie sniffed vehemently in rebuke of the gross partiality of fate in his behalf.

"Just as I had him goin'!" she said bitterly, as if in self-communion, without shifting her gaze from the blank surface of the wall.

Now, however, Burke was reminded once again of his official duties, and he turned quickly to the attentive Cassidy.

"Have you got a picture of this young woman?" he asked brusquely. And when Cassidy had replied in the negative, he again faced the adventuress with a mocking grin—in which mockery, too, was a fair fragment for himself, who had been so thoroughly within her toils of blandishment.

"I'd dearly love to have a photograph of you, Miss Helen Turner West," he said.

"Can That Stuff!"

The speech aroused the stolid detective to a new interest.

"Helen Turner West?" he repeated, inquiringly.

"Oh, that's the name she told me," the Inspector explained, somewhat shamefacedly before this question from his inferior. Then he chuckled, for he had sense of humor sufficient to triumph even over his own discomfiture in this encounter. "And she had me winging, too!" he confessed. "Yes, I admit it." He turned to the girl admiringly. "You sure are immense, little one—immense!" He smiled somewhat more in his official manner of mastery. "And now, may I have the honor of asking you to accept the escort of Mr. Cassidy to the gallery."

Aggie sprang to her feet and regarded the Inspector with eyes in which was now no innocence, such as had beguiled him so recently from those ingenuous orbs.

"Oh, can that stuff!" she cried, crossly. "Let's get down to business on the dot—and no frills on it! Keep to cases!"

"Now you're talking," Burke declared, with a new appreciation of the versatility of this woman—who had not been wasting her time hitherto, and had no wish to lose it now.

"You can't do anything to us," Aggie declared, strongly. There remained no trace of the shrinking violet that had been Miss Helen Travers West. Now, she revealed merely the business woman engaged in a fight against the law, which was opposed definitely to her peculiar form of business.

"You can't do anything to me, and you know you can't!" she went on, with an almost convincing tranquillity of assertion. "Why, I'll be sprung inside an hour." There came a ripple of laughter that reminded the Inspector of the fashion in which he had been overcome by this woman's wiles. And she spoke with a certitude of conviction that was rather terrifying to one who had just fallen under the stress of her spells.

"Why habeas corpus is my lawyer's middle name!"

"On the level, now," the Inspector demanded, quite unmoved by the final declarations, "when did you see Mary Turner last?"

Aggie resorted anew to her practices of deception. Her voice held the accents of unimpeachable truth, and her eyes looked unflinchingly into those of her questioner as she answered.

"Early this morning," she declared. "We slept together last night, because I had the willies. She blew the joint about half-past ten."

Burke shook his head, more in sorrow than in anger.

"What's the use of your lying to me?" he remonstrated.

"What, me?" Aggie clamored, with every evidence of being deeply wounded by the charge against her veracity. "Oh, I wouldn't do anything like that—on the level! What would be the use? I couldn't fool you, Commissioner."

Burke stroked his chin sheepishly, under the influence of memories of Miss Helen Travers West.

"So help me," Aggie continued with the utmost solemnity, "Mary never left the house all night. I'd swear that's the truth on a pile of Bibles a mile high!"

"Have to be higher than that," the Inspector commented, grimly. "You see, Aggie Lynch, Mary Turner was arrested just after midnight." His voice deepened and came blustering. "Young woman, you'd better tell all you know."

"I don't know a thing!" Aggie retorted, sharply. She faced the Inspector fiercely, unabashed by the fact that her vigorous offer to commit perjury had been of no avail.

Burke, with a quick movement, drew the pistol from his pocket and extended it toward the girl.

"How long has she owned this gun?" he said, threateningly.

Aggie Petulant

Aggie showed no trace of emotion as her glance ran over the weapon.

"She didn't own it," was her firm answer.

"Oh, then it's Garson's!" Burke exclaimed.

"I don't know whose it is," Aggie replied, with an air of boredom well calculated to deceive. "I never laid eyes on it till now."

The Inspector's tone abruptly took on a somber coloring, with an underlying menace.

"English Eddie was killed with this gun last night," he said. "Now, who did it?" His broad face was sinister. "Come on, now! Who did it?"

Aggie became flippant, seemingly unimpressed by the Inspector's savageness.

"How should I know?" she drawled. "What did you think I am—a fortune-teller?"

"You'd better come through," Burke reiterated. Then his manner changed to wheedling. "If you're the wise kid I think you are, you will."

Former 'Hobo' Weds on Making $20,000

CHICAGO, June 3.—Several years ago "Hobo Jack" Burzik rambled into the saloon of Jacob Heinz near Church street and the drainage canal west of Evanston. Heinz threw "Jack" out. Burzik came back meekly and asked for a job. Eventually he bought out Heinz, who retired to truck gardening. Last night the former hobo married Heinz's eldest daughter, Margaret, and the couple started East for a long tour. Burzik is worth about $20,000.

PLAN CONTROL OF CURRENCY BY TREASURY

WASHINGTON, June 3.—For the treasury to build up a two-billion-dollar gold reserve, exercise absolute control over the currency and retire gold certificates, greenbacks and national banknotes, is the plan now receiving careful consideration from members of the committees on Banking and Currency of both houses of Congress.

Instead of the central association having control of the currency as proposed by the national monetary commission, a national reserve is established under exclusive control of the treasury.

The plan being considered is believed by the Democrats to be superior to that of the monetary commission, as it places the currency under control of the treasury, whereas the commission's plan is to have the central association largely in private hands.

One of the first tasks under the new scheme would be the redemption of outstanding currency through the use of the two billion gold reserve.

First Bite in 25 Years.

KEARNY, N. J., June 3.—At Young's pier on the Passaic River, in a pail on the dock, is the first fish caught in the Passaic, according to old inhabitants, in twenty-five years. It is a two-pound sea bass, caught by George Tate with a net.

THREE girls who will receive degrees as Bachelors of Law from Boston University tomorrow. Top to bottom: Miss Hazel Small, Medford; Miss Bernice Turner, Connecticut, and Miss Jennie Loitman, Boston.

BERN, June 3.—The authorities recently granted permission to Prince Peter Kropotkin, the Russian Socialist leader, to reside at Lugano despite the expulsion warrant issued against him in 1881. The Prince, who has been an exile in London for many years, refuses to reside in Switzerland.

A Physician's Faith in Eckman's Alterative

"Have used Eckman's Alterative in several cases of tubercular glands of the neck, with excellent results every time. In one case it cost me $50, for the girl was put on it only until she could arrange to be operated, and in a short time an operation was not needed. I suppose your records are just as fine as of old. You know my faith in it."

(Original of this physician's letter on file.)

Eckman's Alterative is effective in other forms. Read what Mrs. Garvin says:

Idaho, Falls, Idaho.

"Gentlemen: I have gained twenty-two pounds since last February and my baby is in perfect health. I have been waiting since she was born to see how I would get along. I am now doing all my work, have been ever since she was four weeks old, and I am steadily gaining. I do not cough or raise anything at all, so I think I am completely cured of Lung Trouble."

(Affidavit) MRS. M. H. GARVIN.

Note—Mrs. Garvin has seven children.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Riker-Jaynes stores, Houghton & Dutton Drug Dept., and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Wants to Promote Over Major Ray

WASHINGTON, June 3.—President Wilson has asked Attorney General McReynolds if he can promote Major Herbert M. Lord of the Quartermaster Corps of the army over Major Beecher B. Ray, ranking Major in that corps. This is a phase of an old army scandal. When last year, Ray was nominated by President Taft to be a Colonel, records were made public showing that Major Ray had been charged with a serious offense involving the wife of his pay clerk, and the Senate refused to confirm his promotion.

Cape Cod Solid for Celebration in 1915

WAREHAM, June 3.—The Boards of Trade of the Cape Cod towns are talking of a joint celebration in the line of the New England fair when the Cape Cod Canal opens in 1915. Already the Falmouth, Sandwich, and Onset boards are enthusiastic over the project. The formation of the Cape Cod Board of Trade will be the first step in the celebration plans.

Having been formally inaugurated by the School Board and the Board of Aldermen, the tea room and "food shop" to be run by pupils of the Somerville Industrial School for Girls was opened for trade today at No. 109 Highland avenue, Somerville.

This is a typical menu and is only one of the repasts which the young ladies will be prepared to serve to customers from now on.

Many of the appointments of the novelty restaurant have been provided by the girls themselves.

The silk candle shades were made by pupils of the millinery class, and the window curtains, a double set, lavender outside and ecru scrim inside, were made by the dressmaking class.

The suite consists of three rooms, a bath and a kitchenette. The kitchenette is to be used as an auxiliary to the main kitchen, for which purpose the original dining room has been appropriated.

The other rooms are the regular lunch and tea room, and one that will be used for a rest room and for special parties.

The lunch and tea room will be under the personal direction of Miss Marion Crawford, and all the cooking will be done on the premises. The "food shop" will contain such delicacies as are usually to be found at a woman's exchange—home-made bread, cakes and preserves. During the Winter months the girls will work at the tea room in relays, so that all may get the business experience. During the Summer a special corps of girls will be on duty.

Snell Bars Fourth Honeymoon Journey

NEW BEDFORD, June 3.—David A. Snell, eighty-six, and his fourth bride, who was his housekeeper, Mrs. Janet Hamilton, fifty-three, will spend their honeymoon at the Snell estate in the Mt. Pleasant section. The bride is a sister-in-law of Bishop Hamilton of the Methodist Church.

Baby Milk Station Open.

The new Dorchester milk station for babies has opened in Dorchester House, Field's Corner, under the auspices of the Milk and Baby Hygiene Association. Miss Caroline S. Callender, founder and president of Dorchester House, was the first speaker at the opening.

"What Did You Do Last Saturday?"

Waltham Asks High School Pupils a Few Questions.

What did you do last Saturday and Sunday, daytime and evening?

What do you do for fun outside of school hours?

How did you spend your spare time last week?

Do you belong to any club or society?

Give the name of the club, how many members, how often it meets. Does it meet at the home of one of the members or in some other place?

Do you know of any clubs that boys and girls under twenty-one belong to?

By demanding answers to the above questions, the city of Waltham intends to find out just what its school boys and school girls are doing outside of school hours.

In order that whatever evils that may exist in the line of unwholesome recreation and unwise out-of-school occupation may be discovered and checked, the "Recreation Survey Committee," appointed by Mayor Duane, has submitted a list of questions to all public school children above the sixth grade.

They have probed dance hall conditions, entertainments of all kinds in which the scholars indulge and their general conduct after school hours.

BALLIN PRAISE FOR NEW DOCK FACILITIES

In reply to cable of General Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the Port Directors, to Director-General Albert Ballin of Hamburg, Germany, congratulating him on the opening of the new service between Hamburg and Boston, the head of the Hamburg-American line sends this cablegram:

PITTSBURGH, June 3.—Nothing daunted by the opening game of the series here, the hustling Pilgrims will try to get even today for the defeat handed them yesterday by the Pirates. Stallings' men have not forgotten that they trounced the Buccaneers four times running recently in the East, and they hope to get away from Pittsburgh tonight with nothing worse than an even break to their credit.

Yesterday was an off day for James, and he has no excuses to offer. The Pirates made his work as hard as possible by frequent bunting, and several times he became mixed up, with the result that runners reached first and were credited with hits when they should have been easy outs.

Tyler Will Pitch Today.

Stallings plans to use Tyler today and is confident that he will stand the Pirates on their heads. Clarke's men did not show anything out of the ordinary yesterday, and if James had pitched as well as he has done on several previous occasions this season, there would have been nothing to the game but Boston.

The chances are that Clarke will send "Lefty" Robinson to the firing line this afternoon. He has done the best pitching of any member of the Corsair's staff this Spring, but in his last time out he was very wild.

Local scribes are singing the praises of Maranville and Meyers. The diminutive shortstop played his usual star game, pulling off one stop that brought him cheers from the stands. Meyers made a wonderful stop at first and saved Whaling from a wild throw which might have let in another run. He reached first base four out of his five times at bat and had several opportunities to prove his wonderful speed.

Considering everything, the opinion prevails here that the Boston team is much improved over last year, and that it will make all its rivals keep stepping this Summer.

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

UNDER ordinary circumstances today's festivities at Fenway Park would be one of the happiest incidents of recent years in Boston baseball. For the American League pennant of 1912 will be formally flung to the breezes, informing the world that the Boston Red Sox are the champions. But the gayety is not quite so ardent as it ought to be, because the Stahl men come home crippled and in fifth place to celebrate the fact that they are champions. There's a bit of incongruity about it, you see.

* * *

THIS is the third time that an American League championship pennant has been hoisted in Boston. The last time was in 1905, proclaiming the Red Sox the "champs" of 1904. The Sox also won the pennant the year before. They have been champions in three of the thirteen years the league has been in existence. The White Sox their opponents today—won thrice, in 1900, 1901 and 1906. The Athletics, who lead the league today, have won four times, in 1902, 1905, 1910 and 1911. The only other winners were the Detroit Tigers, who finished first in 1907, 1908 and 1909.

* * *

EVEN in the realms of fiction, Jimmy McAleer is still pursued by the jinx. After seeing the most of his champions crippled at one time or another this season, he went to Atlanta, Ga.—according to A. H. C. Mitchell—and, outbidding all the other big league magnates, paid $50,000 for Gordon Kelly, the wizard outfielder. After investing the $50,000—we read in the current installment of "The Triple Tie"—McAleer saw his "find" play his last game at Atlanta before coming North and watched the youngster win a game with a home run swat with "three on," only to have his leg broken as he slid into the plate.

Being plentifully equipped with imagination, we had rather hoped to see Gordon Kelly work against the White Sox today, with full confidence that he would win the game. According to Mr. Mitchell's story, however, Kelly will be laid up for several weeks and we will have to worry along with the more prosy, if not so expensive, champions as they exist today.

* * *

THESE are the flourishing days of the old-timers. Nick Altrock has pitched seven consecutive innings without a run scored against him—five innings against the Athletics and two against the Red Sox. Heinie Peitz, whom we had not heard from for a long time, stepped behind the bat for St. Louis and, among other things, twice cut down Heinie Zimmerman in the act of stealing second.

* * *

IF the followers of pugilism are a bit sensitive and sensible, they will protest against the proposition to welcome Arthur Pelky home to that occasion, he will receive the loving cup. According to information received today, Pelky has been invited to referee the bout between Terry Brooks and Gilbert Gallant at Chicopee, next Monday night. Upon that ocasion, he will receive the loving cup, if the present plans are not upset.

Pelky would never have been so honored had he not knocked out Luther McCarty, the white heavyweight champion. His return to Chicopee would have been unnoticed save by his own intimate friends.

Wherefore, we find Chicopee in the act of presenting Arthur Pelky with a loving cup and making a hero of him just BECAUSE HE KILLED A MAN!

That is what it means, in the best analysis—a loving cup and a public reception for SLAYING THE CHAMPION!

An exalting, edifying evidence of civilization—don't you think? We agree with your reply.

* * *

Reminds you of the days of "Bluebeard, "Jack the Giant Killer," "David and Goliath" and all them strong-armed fellers; what do you say?

* * *

WITH the exception of four games at Philadelphia, the Red Sox will be home until July 8.

They play Chicago four games, beginning today, and Cleveland four, beginning Saturday. St. Louis will be here for a series of four, beginning Thursday, June 12.

The Tigers will be the morning and afternoon visitors on June 17, and will also play here June 18 and 19.

Then the Sox go over to Philadelphia for four games.

They will be back home to receive the Yankees June 25, 26, 27 and 28, and the Washington Senators June 30, July 1, 2 and 3. The Athletics will play two games at Fenway Park July 4, and will stay over July 5 and 7.

Then the Sox will leave for their second Western trip.

* * *

HAL CHASE is booked to appear in Boston today—although, unfortunately, or fortunately, as the case may be, not in a Red Sox uniform. Chase is to hold down first base for the Chicago White Sox.

"Prince Hal" ought to be about as good a first baseman as he used to be when he was considered the greatest of them all. Indisposition to play a subordinate position with a team he used to manage doubtless accounted—in part, at least—for Chase's inferior work with the Yankees. Experience has proved that ex-managers are not successful when they shed their title but continue on the same pay-roll.

If this is all that disaffected Chase's work, he should now shine as a regular champion in the White Sox ranks. He will receive enough money consideration to call for brilliant play. It is understood that Comiskey will pay him $8,000, the same sum he received in New York.

* * *

IF Chase really did "lay down" in New York, he did not treat his employer as fairly as his employer treated Chase. For, after Hal made a failure of the job of managing the Yankees in 1911, Frank Farrell continued paying him $8,000, which was the price he was given in consideration of being manager as well as player—although Farrell had to hire Harry Wolverton, as well, to do the managing.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

WITH Frank Chance as manager of the New York Americans, it was only a question of time when Hal Chase would be traded. No man who has been manager of a team can work for another manager. Chase is one of those fellows that got the managerial bug. When Stallings was manager of the New Yorks he accused Chase of conspiring to defeat him by playing poor ball. It was pretty generally believed that Chase did tunnel Stallings, although Farrell, who owns the New York Club, stood up for the first baseman and afterwards made him manager. President Johnson, who has long held a grudge against Stallings, was also instrumental in forcing him out of the American League. However, Stallings maintains his popularity among baseball men.

CHASE is a peculiar individual. A fine ball player when he wants to be, he is yet a man that will sulk or play indifferently if things are not just to his suiting. Baseball men are of the opinion that it was the gravest mistake to have made him manager of the New York team. He made a dismal fizzle as manager, and has been of little use to the New York Club ever since his reign as manager ended.

IT is expected that Chase will be in the White Sox lineup today. If he plays the ball he is capable of playing, he will undoubtedly strengthen Comiskey's team. The White Sox have been going well this season, though not as well as they did last season, when they led the league at this stage of the game. But they have been playing good ball all along, and are surely to be reckoned with right through the season.

BEFORE leaving on the Western trip, Manager Stallings spoke of a matter he intends to bring to the attention of the National League at the earliest opportunity. Stallings wants a rule passed that will compel a manager to make out his batting order before the game starts, hand it to the umpire and then walk away. Stallings wants that manager to be forced to play the men he has named in the lineup. Also he wants the list turned in to the umpire alone—no other man to have a look at it. In short, as Stallings believes, the managers should make up their lists without the opposing manager seeing the names on them. The teams as named should play the game until there is legitimate need of a change, such as a player being injured, or fired from the game, or a change of pitchers, or the putting in of a pinch hitter.

IN the recent St. Louis series, Manager Huggins pitched Sallee one day and the next day he had Sallee on the score cards as a right fielder. Of course Huggins did not intend to allow Sallee to play in the outfield—or any other position except pitcher for that matter—and he only had his name on the score card in order to allow him to chose one of two real outfielders a soon as it became known whether the Boston club would use a right-handed or a left-handed pitcher. If a right-handed pitcher started for Boston, Huggins would put Sheckard, a left-handed batter, in right field, and if a left-handed pitcher went to the box for Boston Huggins would use his right-handed batter for the right garden.

THIS, of course, gave the visiting club an advantage as, being the last to take the field in the first inning, the manager had a chance to select his right fielder according to who pitched for Boston.

In working to the advantage of the visiting club, of course, the scheme worked to the disadvantage of the home club. Stallings believes the home club should not be handicapped. He believes that the batting order as made out by the managers before the game should be made to stand, and that the opposing manager should not have a chance to look at it before the game starts.

Winthrop Is Winner.

Winthrop High defeated Lynn Classical High at Winthrop Centre by the score of 5 to 4. It was one of the best fought games seen this year on the Winthrop diamond.

Red Sox Raise Pennant Today

◆ ◆ ◆

Chicago to Oppose Champions

The world's champion Red Sox will return to Fenway Park today, where they will clash with their white hosed brethren from Chicago in the first of a four-game series. The occasion will be featured by the raising of the banner which the Red Sox won by finishing first in the American League pennant struggle last year.

Mayor Fitzgerald has been selected to raise the banner to the top of the flagstaff at Fenway Park. The Mayor is a thirty-third degree baseball "fan." He led the little band of royal rooters who journeyed to Baltimore in order to cheer the Boston Nationals on to victory in 1897 and has been very active in rooting for Boston baseball teams ever since.

The players of both the Red Sox and White Sox teams will march to the flag pole in center field and the band, which will give a concert before and during the game, will play one of its most stirring pieces. It is needless to say that the big crowd of "fans," who are certain to turn out in order to welcome Stahl's crippled crew home, will make their presence known.

Walsh to Face Sox.

The game itself should be a bitter affair. Hal Chase will make his first appearance in a Chicago uniform and should strengthen Callahan's team. The White Sox manager ridicules the report that he intends to trade Chase to Detroit for Ty Cobb while President Navin of the Tigers brands the report of the trade, which originated in Chicago, as a joke.

Harry Lord will be back in the Chicago lineup today. Lord has been at his home in Maine for a few days, as he has been unable to play on account of an injured elbow.

"Big" Ed Walsh will probably pitch for Chicago. The big fellow has always proved a puzzle to the Boston batters, and they will have to play their best game in order to win.

Ray Collins is expected to do the honors on the mound for the champions. The Vermont pitcher is in grand condition, as he recently proved when he bested the mighty Walter Johnson in a pitching duel by the score of 1 to 0.

Champions Wallop Yanks.

The Sox won two games from the New York Yankees yesterday. They captured the first contest by the score of 4 to 3, while they breezed in winners in the second battle by an 8 to 6 score.

The loss of yesterday's double-header makes the New York Highlanders' record nine straight defeats, thirteen straight defeats on the Polo Grounds this season, and eighteen straight defeats in New York by Boston.

The Highlanders have not won from the Red Sox in New York since 1911—or, to be exact, since June 22, 1911, when Boston was beaten in a five-inning game, 7 to 0, play being stopped by rain.

Kolehmainen Barred From New York Race

NEW YORK, June 3.—Hannes Kolehmainen, the wonderful Finnish runner, has been barred from the Coney Island derby, a six-mile scratch race to be held at the resort on Thursday, on the grounds that "He is too fast, and his presence in the contest would mean that no one else had any chance of winning." The race oddly enough has among its entries the names of some of the fastest sprinters around New York.

McGuire Loses Bout.

GLOUCESTER, June 3.—Felix McGuire of East Boston lost to Young Hugo Kelley of Fall River in ten rounds at the Gloucester S. and A. C. here. Eddie Butler of Beachmont won from Al McInnes of Lynn in six rounds, and Young Bush of Lynn and Bowker Lowrie of Salem fought four rounds to a draw.

To Have Free Day at Belmont Park

NEW YORK, June 3.—August Belmont, the millionaire lover of horse racing, who is largely responsible for the re-establishment of horse racing in this State, has announced hereafter on the last racing day of each week the infield will be thrown open to the public free of charge. Belmont declared that he hoped by this means to give lovers of racing a chance to see the ponies in action even if they haven't the price for admission tickets. The first free day will be on Friday.

New Boat Race Entry.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 3.—Another boat, the fifth, was today entered in the Philadelphia to Bermuda motor boat race, which starts Saturday. The new entry is a fifty-footer, owned by C. C. Hadley of Mount Vernon, N. Y.

HARVARD CREWS TO HOLD HARD WORKOUT TODAY

RED TOP, Ct., June 3.—The Harvard crews will be given a hard workout on the Thames today in preparation for their annual races with Yale.

The crews arrived here early last evening and lost no time in getting to work. Both the varsity and freshmen crews went out with a temporary shift on account of some of the crew being held at Cambridge to take "exams," but they are expected to reach here in time for today's practice.

Murray took Reynolds' place at bow and Harwood took Goodale's at No. 6, Chanler going in at stroke.

The evening's practice was in the form of a long paddle, the varsity going over the entire course to the railroad bridge and back again, while the freshmen rowed about six miles. The conditions were perfect for fast work if the regular crew was here.

Robert F. Herrick, chairman of Harvard Advisory Committee, accompanied the crews to the quarters and watched them at work. He left for New York last night.

The freshmen crew, who are a husky lot, also had a temporary shift, Lyman taking Herrick's place at stroke and Potter and Soucy shifting positions at No. 5 and No. 3. The crews rowed as follows:

Varsity eight—Stroke, Chanler; No. 7, Stratton; No. 6, Harwood; No. 5, MacVickar; No. 4, G. von L. Meyer; No. 3, E. D. Morgan, Jr.; No. 2, Trumbull; bow, Murray; cox., Captain C. T. Abeles.

EXETER MEETS ANDOVER BALL NINE SATURDAY

The annual baseball game between Phillips-Exeter and Phillips-Andover academies will take place Saturday at Exeter and the usual bitter rivalry will undoubtedly exist between both representatives. As all other school schedules have practically been terminated, this annual classic event will be a fitting climax to the schoolboy baseball season.

Exeter appears to rule as favorite in the coming battle. On the comparison of what the two teams have done this season, Exeter has won seven games and lost three, while the Andover squad has won but two games and lost nine. This is one of the poorest records ever chalked up against Andover.

Exeter has won from three of the teams which have beaten Andover, besides having won from the only nine that has beaten Dean Academy this year, that being Boston College. Dean Academy, nevertheless, has a verdict over the Exe[illegible].

Where the Andover hopes lies is that the team has made a vast improvement in games played lately which has, in all probability, put them on edge for its game with Exeter.

Worcester Academy, with a record of twelve straight victories, defeated Andover by the close score of 10 to 8. Andover scored double the number of runs against Worcester Academy that any other team has this season.

The 4 to 0 defeat at the hands of the Harvard varsity squad on Saturday can by no means be looked upon as a bad showing even though some Andover teams in the past have given the university veterans [illegible] rub.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 3.—William McCarney, manager of the late Luther McCarty, who was killed in a pugilistic encounter at Calgary, Alberta, has arrived here with Mrs. McCarty, widow of the fighter, to see about the disposition of the dead pugilist's estate, estimated to be worth $15,000.

Judge Lydy of the Probate Court holds Mrs. McCarty is not eligible to act as administratrix of the estate.

Choice Place for Cornell in Race

NEW YORK, June 3.—Drawings for the courses in the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie on June 21 were made yesterday in the office of Morton G. Bogue, chairman of the board of stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association. At the last minute a telegram was received from the University of Washington, saying that in addition to entering an eight-oared crew in the varsity race it was the desire of the Washington management to enter a four-oared crew in the race for the varsity fours, so that in the two varsity events there will be six crews and in the freshman race five.

Cornell received the choice of positions in the varsity race provided that the day is a good one and the race is rowed on time. The Ithacans pulled course No. 6, which is the extreme outside and is nearly in the middle of the river, so unless there is rough water they will have the full force of the strongest part of the ebb tide. The drawings in the varsity were: Syracuse, No. 1; Wisconsin, No. 2; Washington, No. 3; Columbia, No. 4; Pennsylvania, No. 5, and Cornell, No. 6.

MIKE GIBBONS MEETS WHITE AT ATLAS A. A.

By JACK CONWAY.

Mike Gibbons will perform in our fair city again this evening. The wonderful St. Paul boxer, who is able to vanquish the average glove wielder without hardly an effort, clashes with Joe White of South Boston in a twelve round contest at the Atlas A. A.

The phantom from the West rules a big favorite, but there are a number of local "fans" who believe that White will surprise Gibbons by his work.

Joe is a corking good middleweight. He has won many hard battles from the best boys of his weight in New England. He has also scored several important victories in New York rings.

White Confident of Win.

The South Boston boy, however, has never been pitted against such a ring marvel as Gibbons. It waits to be seen whether his manager was a little bit hasty in matching him with the St. Paul man.

White is confident that he will triumph tonight or, at the very least, get a draw. He does not believe that Gibbons will be able to hurt him a great deal, while he is not bashful in declaring that Mike will make a rapid retreat if he ever lands one of his star "haymakers."

Gibbons is anxious to win by a knockout. He has been performing in grand style since he re-entered the ring after a long rest. He has scored decisive victories, over Gus Christie, Jack McCarron and Jim Perry. Gibbons stopped Perry in two rounds in Pittsburgh last week and would like to add White to his list of K. O. victims.

The semi-final bout should be a slashing affair. It will bring together "Fighting Terry" Brooks of New York and Frankie Mack of Beachmont. Mack is a clever boxer but Brooks' hitting ability should enable him to win.

Two Preliminary Bouts.

There will be two six-round preliminaries. Al Limerick of Haverhill meets "Young" Ketchell of New York in the opening preliminary, while "Young" Kenney of Woburn will entertain Ed Bennett of Quincy in the other six-round "go."

Stanley Loses Title to Bill Beynon

LONDON, June 2.—Bill Beynon won the English bantam championship here from "Digger" Stanley, the holder of the title. The fight, which was before the National Sporting Club, went twenty rounds, Beynon winning on the referee's decision. Eddie Morgan, the champion of Wales, was scheduled to fight Stanley but illness prevented him from appearing.

"H[illegible] Smith [illegible] his leg gets [illegible] him to run the bases you'll see him up [illegible] the plate with that bit of [illegible] forget all about the girl."

A confirmed bachelor himself, Long Tom Morrissey and nevertheless called the turn. Something was on Gordon Kelly's mind, and true to Long Tom's prophecy, it was Mildred Deery. The patient tried to reason things out, but the more he thought the further he went from a satisfactory conclusion. Mildred [illegible] self. [illegible] why did she [illegible] on the field in the presence of that vast crowd when she saw he was injured? Did she care for him? If so, why did she take herself away and leave no word for him or send him no word? Did she want to forget him entirely? Was she ashamed of her act on the ball field? He asked himself these questions and dozens of others like them over and over again and arrived at nowhere.

The days passed and day by day Gordon Kelley asked himself his endless chain of questions. The situation became unbearable. At last they removed the plaster cast from his leg and told him a change of air would do him more good than anything, but warned him to treat his leg tenderly. He made a last attempt and called up the Deery residence, with the same result as before.

Disappeared in Night

He said good-bye to his friends at the hospital, went to his room near the ball park, packed his things and that night summoned an express wagon. Without any definite idea of why he did so, he pulled a slouch hat over his eyes and turned up the collar of his coat to conceal his identity, jumped on the tailend of the wagon and gave an order to the driver.

That was the last seen of Gordon Kelly for some months. He disappeared in the dead of night as if from the face of the earth. For weeks and weeks the police authorities, private detectives employed by the Boston club and baseball reporters, who became amateur sleuths for the [illegible] being sought for him in vain. The disappearance of Gordon Kelly, the fifty [illegible] was an unsolved mystery.

CHAPTER XX.

HALF an hour after her emotional scene at the ball park, Mildred Deery found herself at home, without knowing exactly how she got there and not caring, either. She com[illegible] to her room. Although the incidents of the afternoon had well nigh exhausted her she was still in a state of great mental excitement. After a time, however, her faculties became more composed and she was able to review the scene in which she had taken such a conspicuous part.

One thing stood out clearly in her mind. She had lost her heart to Gordon Kelly. But she blushed to think how she had lost control of herself and she wondered what sort of an opinion he would have of her. Ah, well, it was too late now to change anything. She would not have it changed, anyway, she told herself.

Late that night, after her father and mother had retired, she stole down stairs to the telephone and inquired of a newspaper office as to the condition of Gordon Kelly. On being assured that there was nothing more serious than a broken leg and that he was resting comfortably, she crept back to her room, sighed happily and soon after was in the land of dreams.

Galen Deery, who never read the sporting pages and who was so wrapped up in his business affairs that he didn't know a baseball from a boxing glove, nearly fell off his chair at the breakfast table next morning when he unfolded his newspaper and glanced at the first page. He ate his breakfast at the ungodly hour of 7.30 every morning, bar Sundays, and he ate it alone, as his wife and daughter preferred to snatch a few more winks of beauty sleep at that particular hour of the day.

Scares His Wife

Under ordinary conditions, Deery was able to eat his morning meal while holding his newspaper in his left hand. He attempted to do so this particular morning, but was altogether too perturbed, so he waived breakfast and devoted himself exclusively to the reading of the [illegible] and-ing escapade of his daughter, Mildred, so graphically described in the columns before him. When he had fully grasped the situation, he took the stairs, two steps at a jump, and bursting into his wife's bedchamber, nearly scared the wits out of that lady.

"Goodness gracious, Galen, how you frightened me!" she exclaimed. "What has happened?"

Deery was not a profane man, but his wife was shocked at the language he used as he strode up and down the floor, waving the newspaper, while he tried vainly to explain the cause of his agitation.

"Calm yourself, dear, and let us talk this matter over quietly," said Mrs. Deery at last. "Tell me just what happened."

"Where did Mildred go yesterday afternoon?" demanded her husband.

"She went to a baseball game with Blanche Oldring and her brother, Jack."

"Well, here is what happened." And Deery recited the story he had just read in the newspaper. "Now, what's to be done?" he asked in conclusion.

Somehow or other Mrs. Deery was not as shocked over the conduct of her daughter as some mothers might have been under the circumstances. She herself had taken a great fancy to Gordon Kelly and, with a mother's intuition, she knew Mildred [illegible] the young man. Far better than her husband she appreciated the feelings that must have incited her daughter to act as she did. The notoriety was dreadful, of course, but there was nothing criminal about it. It was no State's prison offense. Mrs. Deery thought the matter over carefully before replying to her husband's question.

"I want to speak to Mildred about it," she said finally.

"Speak to her about it! What good will that do?" exclaimed Deery. "That won't mend matters, will it? That won't wipe all this stuff from the newspapers, will it? Speak to her! I'm going to do a little speaking to her myself. I'll, I'll [illegible] slapped his thigh vigorously. "I have [illegible] I was planning to go up in the [illegible] with a surveyor tomorrow and look over that property I was telling you about. That cottage I built for my superintendent is finished, and he has [illegible] moved in by this time. Instead of going tomorrow I will leave by the noon train today and take Mildred with me. You can come up in a day or two to keep her company, but she's got to stay there until this thing blows over, if it takes a year. I'll send a maid to wake her up now and tell her to slip on something as I want to see her."

Deery turned to leave the room, but [illegible] called him back.

"[illegible] minute, please, dear. Mildred [illegible], and you cannot force her to do something she doesn't want to do. If you told her, under your present excitement, to pack her things and go to the mountains with you, she wouldn't budge an inch. I think your plan is a good one, but you must be diplomatic in order to carry it out. Wait a few minutes until you regain your composure and then ask her in a nice way if she wouldn't like to make a little trip with you to the mountains and she will jump at the chance. Then I will join her in a day or two and after that I think there will be no difficulty in keeping her there, on some pretext, as long as necessary; or until this thing blows over, as you express it."

Deery saw the wisdom of his wife's remarks and the result was he forced himself to a calm, after which a maid was sent to see if Mildred was awake. Yes, she was dressing and would be ready in a few minutes.

Deery nearly overplayed himself in inviting his daughter to make a trip with him to the mountains and Mildred looked at him suspiciously once or twice, but her mother came to the rescue and allayed her doubts, whereupon she said she would be delighted to go.

"I thought of this trip just before breakfast," said Deery, lying like a good fellow, "and I rushed right up to speak to your mother about it. The consequence is I'm hungry, so I propose we all have breakfast together for a change. My dear," turning to his wife, "we will give you just ten minutes in which to dress." In rare good humor by this time, Deery ran downstairs with his newspaper and devoted the ten minutes to a careful study of the financial quotations.

A Carful of Supplies

When Deery started out to do anything he did it well. Having secured his daughter's consent to accompany him to the mountains, he put in a busy morning preparing for her comfort. After telephoning his superintendent what to expect, he chartered an express car and loaded it with a runabout from his garage, five barrels of gasoline, a box of the latest novels, all the magazines, hammocks, a lawn tennis set, a croquet set (neither of which she ever opened) ten pounds of the best assorted candy (the kind that dries up in about four days) and two score of foolish things she had no earthly use for. He came near buying a smart-looking doll he saw in a store window. He also bought a lot of flower garden seed he thought might help occupy her time. Besides all these things he ordered and had put in the car no end of solid and fancy groceries. In short, he laid himself out to get everything he thought she might need for her comfort and amusement, including a fancy little revolver and a light rifle with plenty of cartridges.

Galen Deery did all these things in two hours and forty minutes: drove to his house, saw that Mildred's trunk was strapped on the trunk rack of the automobile, told Mildred's maid to get in the car, and then gallantly handed his daughter into the tonneau, kissed his wife, sped to the depot, arriving there with seven minutes to spare. They took their seats in the Pullman, the express car was attached to the rear of the train, and they were soon on their way to the mountains.

Deery's domain in the Georgia mountains is six or seven miles from the railroad, in a wild and solitary region. There was a good road leading uphill nearly all the way from the little settlement, bearing the somewhat queer-sounding name of Pew Creek, where the train stopped. In the heart of his property, pending the starting of his [illegible] Deery had erected a [illegible] cottage, on the bungalow type, for the use of himself and his superintendent, who was early on the ground getting things in shape for prompt work when Deery's big scheme materialized. This cottage was situated a quarter of a mile from the [illegible] ing brook that, a mile or two beyond, [illegible]. It was a beautiful [illegible] Mildred [illegible] delight when she saw it for the first time late that afternoon, as the runabout, driven by herself, dashed up to the bungalow.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Galen Deery gallantly handed his daughter into the tonneau.

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME

HALL CAINE

Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Magazine—Copyrighted in Great Britain.

An extract from this great story, now running in Hearst's Magazine, which is the talk of the country—the most virile and daring novel ever penned by this famous author. Read the synopsis and instalment, and then continue it in Hearst's Magazine for June, just out.

By Hall Caine

Author of "The Christian," "The Prodigal Son," Etc., Etc.
Illustrated by Frank Craig.

Mary O'Neill, the heroine of this great story. In "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" is contained the true story of Mary O'Neill, told by herself and written from her memoranda. Forced into a loveless marriage with a profligate Lord Raa, Mary is despondent and later terrified to find that she has fallen desperately in love with an old play-fellow. Read how she fights against temptation, only to be overcome with her overwhelming love for this man. This is the story you have been hearing about and the one that has created such a sensation throughout the country. Mr. Caine has not minced words in discussing the true-to-life situations that continually occur in his novel, but paints word-pictures of living truths that drive their lessons home

FULL SYNOPSIS.

Daniel O'Neill, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambitions to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Ellan may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, whose happiness is supposed to follow her father's dictates, dares to hope that her loveless union with this godless man may be purged of all its sordidness by the sacred sacrament through which she and her husband have just passed. That this hope is unfounded the events of their first evening together soon prove to her. Shocked to discover his lordship to be a man of sordid, sensual passions, Lady Raa refuses utterly to have anything to do with her husband until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and of his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever-closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress and go home.

Mary's homecoming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home, Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. Eventually she consults Father Dan, telling him that she can no longer live with her unfaithful husband, but his counsel is that she cleave to the Church and give up Martin Conrad. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a frail thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real wife, I am your real husband," ringing in her brain, she forgets everything else and with strong step walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to sink her identity in the whirlpool of London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. Mary books passage for Liverpool on the midnight steamer, traveling in the steerage to further guard her flight.

Alone in London

AT eight o'clock next morning I was in the train leaving Liverpool for London.

I had selected a second-class compartment labelled: "For Ladies," and my only travelling companion was a tall, fair woman, in a seal-skin coat and a very large black hat. She had filled the carriage with the warm odor of eau-de-Cologne and the racks on both sides with her luggage, which chiefly consisted of ladies' hat boxes of various shapes and sizes.

Hardly had we started when I realized that she was a very loquacious and expensive person.

Was I going all the way? Yes? Did I live in Liverpool? No? In London, perhaps? No? Probably I lived in the country? Yes? That was charming, the country being so lovely.

"Any friends in London?"

"No."

"None whatever?"

"None whatever."

"But won't you be lonely by yourself in London?"

"A little lonely, perhaps."

Being satisfied with what she had found out about me my traveling companion (probably from the mere love of talking) told me something about herself.

She was a fashionable milliner and had a shop in the West End of London. Occasionally she made personal visits to the provinces to take orders from the leading shopkeepers, but during the season she found it more profitable to remain in town, where her connection was large, among people who could pay the highest prices.

By this time we had reached Crewe, and as there was some delay in getting into the station, my traveling companion put her head out of the window to inquire the cause.

"I see what it is," she said. "The shooting season is over, and the society people are coming down from the moors. I know lots and lots of them. They are my best customers—the gentlemen at all events."

"The gentlemen?"

"Why, yes," she said with a little laugh.

After some shunting our Liverpool carriages were coupled to the Scotch train and run into the station, where a number of gentlemen in knickerbockers and cloth caps were strolling about the platform.

My companion seemed to know them all, and gave them their names, generally their Christian names, and often their familiar ones.

SHE DODGES HER HUSBAND'S FRIEND.

Suddenly I had a shock. A tall man, whose figure I recognized, passed close by our carriage, and I had only time to conceal myself from observation behind the curtain of the window.

"Hello!" cried my companion. "There's Teddy Eastcliff. He married Camilla, the Russian dancer. They first met in my shop, I may tell you."

I was feeling hot and cold by turns, but a thick veil must have hidden my confusion, for after we left Crewe my companion, becoming still more confidential, talked for a long time about her aristocratic customers, and I caught a glimpse of a life that was on the verge of a kind of fashionable Bohemia.

More than once I recognized my husband's friends among the number of her clients, and trembling lest my husband himself should become a subject of discussion, I made the excuse of a headache to close my eyes and be silent.

My companion thereupon slept, very soundly and rather audibly, from Rugby to Willesden, where, awakening with a start while the tickets were being collected, she first powdered her face by her fashion-glass, and then interested herself afresh in my own affairs.

"Did you say, my dear, that you have no friends in London?"

I repeated that I had none.

"Then you will go to an hotel, I suppose?"

I answered that I should have to look for something less expensive.

"In that case," she said, "I think I know something that will suit you exactly."

It was a quiet Boarding Establishment in Bloomsbury—comfortable house, reasonable terms, and, above all, perfectly respectable. In fact, it was kept by her own sister, and if I liked she would take me along in her cab and drop me at the door. Should she?

Looking back at that moment I cannot but wonder that after what I had heard I did not fear discovery. But during the silence of the last hour I had been feeling more than ever weak and helpless, so that when my companion offered me a shelter in that great, noisy, bewildering city in which I had intended to hide myself, but now feared I might be submerged and lost, with a willing, if not a cheerful heart, I accepted.

SHE ARRIVES AT HER NEW HOME.

Half an hour afterward our cab drew up in a street off Russell square at a rather grimy-looking house which stood at the corner of another and smaller square that was shut off by an iron railing.

The door was opened by a young waiter of sixteen or seventeen years, who was wearing a greasy dress suit and a soiled shirt front.

My companion pushed into the hall, I followed her, and almost at the same moment a still larger and perhaps grosser woman than my friend, with the same features and complexion, came out of a room to the left with a serviette in her hand.

"Sophie!"

"Jane," cried my companion, and pointing to me she said, "I've brought you a new boarder."

Then followed a rapid account of where she had met, who and what I was, and why I had come up to London.

"I've promised you'll take her in and not charge her too much, you know."

"Why, no, certainly not," said the sister.

At the next moment the boy waiter was bringing my trunk into the house on his shoulder, and my traveling companion was bidding me good-bye and saying she would look me up later.

When the door was closed I found the house full of the smell of hot food, chiefly roast beef and green vegetables, and I could hear the clink of knives and forks and the clatter of dishes in the room the landlady had come from.

"You'd like to go to your bedroom at once, wouldn't you?" she said.

We went up two flights of stairs covered with rather dirty druggeting, along a corridor that had a thin strip of linoleum, and finally up a third flight that was bare to the boards, until we came to a room which seemed to be at the top of the house and situated in its remotest corner.

"I dare say this will do for the present," said my landlady, and though my heart was in my mouth I compelled myself to agree.

THE GROTESQUE SET OF FELLOW BOARDERS

"My terms, including meals and all extras, will be a pound a week," she added, and to that also, with a lump in my throat, I assented, whereupon my landlady left me, saying lunch was just in, and I could come downstairs when I was ready.

A talkative, cockney chambermaid, with a good little face, brought me a fat, blue jug of hot water, and after I had washed and combed I found my way down to the dining room.

The company, who were of both sexes and chiefly elderly, seemed to me at that first sight to be dressed in every variety of out-of-date clothes, many of them rather shabby and some almost grotesque.

Raising their faces from their plates they looked at me as I entered, and I was so confused that I stood hesitating near the door until the landlady called to me.

"Come up here," she said, and when I had done so, and taken the seat by her side, which had evidently been reserved for me, she whispered, "I don't think my sister mentioned your name, my dear. What is it?"

I had no time to deliberate.

"O'Neill," I whispered back, and thereupon my landlady, raising her voice, and addressing the company as if they had been members of her family, said, "Mrs. O'Neill, my dears."

Then the ladies at the table inclined their heads at me and smiled, while the men (especially those who were the most strangely dressed) rose from their seats and bowed deeply.

The Missing Peeress

OF all houses in London this, I thought, was the least suitable to me.

Looking down the table I told myself that it must be the very home of idle gossip and the hotbed of tittle-tattle.

I was wrong. Hardly had I been in the house when I realized that my fellow-guests were the most reserved and self-centred of all possible people.

One old gentleman who wore a heavy moustache, and had been a colonel in the Indian army, was understood to be a student of Biblical prophecy, having collected some thousands of texts which established the identity of the British nation with the lost tribes of Israel.

Another old gentleman, who wore a patriarchal beard and had taken "orders" without securing a living, was believed to be writing a history of the world, and (after forty years of continuous labor) to have reached the century before Christ.

An elderly lady with a benign expression was said to be a tragic actress who was studying in secret for a season at the National Theatre.

Such, and of such kind, were my housemates, and I have since been told that every great city has many such groups of people, the great prophets, the great historians, the great authors, the great actors—those the world does not know, the odds and ends of humanity—thrown aside by the rushing river of life into the gulleyways that line its banks, the odd brothers, the odd sisters, the odd uncles, the odd aunts, for whom there is no place in the family, in society, or in the business of the world.

It was all very curious and pathetic, yet I should have been safe, for a time at all events, in this little corner of London into which chance had so strangely thrown me but for one unfortunate happening.

That was the arrival of the daily newspaper.

There was never more than a single copy. It came at 8 in the morning and was laid on the dining-room mantelpiece, from which (by an unwritten law of the house) it was the duty as well as the honor of the person who had first finished breakfast to take it up and read the most startling part of the news to the rest of the company.

Thus it occurred that on the third morning after my arrival I was startled by the voice of the old Colonel who, standing back to the fire, with the newspaper in his hand, cried: "Mysterious disappearance of a peeress."

"Read it," said the old clergyman.

The teacup which I was raising to my mouth trembled in my hand, and when I set it down it rattled against the saucer. I knew what was coming, and it came.

The old Colonel read:

SHE HEARS THE STORY OF HER DISAPPEARANCE.

"A telegram from Blackwater announces the mysterious disappearance of the young wife of Lord Raa, which appears to have taken place late on Thursday night or in the early hours of Friday morning.

"It will be remembered that the missing lady was married a little more than a year ago, and her disappearance is the more unaccountable from the fact that during the past month she has been actively occupied in preparing for a fete in honor of her return home after a long and happy honeymoon.

"The pavilion in which the fete was to have been held had been erected on a headland between Castle Raa and a precipitous declivity to the sea, and the only reasonable conjecture is that the unhappy lady, going out on Thursday night to superintend the last preparations, lost her way in the darkness, and fell over the cliffs.

"The fact that the hostess was missing was not generally known in Ellan until the guests had begun to arrive for the reception on Friday evening, when the large assembly broke up in great confusion.

"Naturally much sympathy is felt for the grief-stricken husband."

After the colonel had finished reading I had an almost irresistible impulse to scream, feeling sure that the moment my housemates looked into my face they must see that I was the person indicated.

They did not look, and after a chorus of exclamations ("Most mysterious!" "What can have become of her?" "On the eve of her fete, too!") they began to discuss disappearances in general, each illustrating his point by reference to the subject of his own study.

It would take long to tell of the feverish days that followed—how newspaper correspondents were sent from London to Ellan to inquire into the circumstances of my disappearance; how the theory of accident gave place to the theory of suicide, and the theory of suicide to the theory of flight; how a porter on the pier at Blackwater said he had carried my trunk to the steamer that sailed on Thursday midnight, thinking I was a maid from the great house until I had given him half-a-crown (his proper fee being three-pence); how two female passengers had declared that a person answering to my description had sailed with them to Liverpool; how these clues had been followed up and had led to nothing, and how, finally, the correspondents had concluded the whole incident of my disappearance could not be more mysterious if I had dropped from mid-air into the middle of the Irish Sea.

A REWARD OF 500 POUNDS IS OFFERED.

But then came another development.

My father, who was reported to have received the news of my departure in a way that suggested that he had lost control of his senses (raging and storming at my husband like a man demented), having come to the sudden conclusion that I, being in a peculiarly sensitive condition, had received a serious shock resulting in a loss of memory, offered five hundred pounds reward for information that would lead to my discovery, which was not only desirable to allay the distress of my heart-broken family, but urgently necessary to settle important questions of title and inheritance.

With this offer of a reward came a description of my personal appearance.

"Age twenty; a little under medium height; slight; very black hair; lustrous dark eyes; regular features; pale face; grave expression; unusually sunny smile."

It would be impossible for me to say with what perturbation I heard these reports read out by the old colonel and the old clergyman. Even the nervous stirring of my spoon and the agitated clatter of my knife and fork made me wonder that my housemates did not realize the truth, which must, I thought, be plainly evident to all eyes.

They never did, being so utterly immersed in their own theories, but all the same I sometimes felt as if my fellow guests in that dingy house in Bloomsbury were my judges and jury, and more than once, in my great agitation, when the reports came near to the truth, I wanted to say, "Stop, stop, don't you see it is I?"

That I never did so was due to the fact that not knowing what legal powers my father would have had to compel my return to Ellan, the terror that sat on me like a nightmare was that of being made the subject of a public quarrel between my father and my husband, concerning the legitimacy of my unborn child, with the shame and disgrace which that would bring not only upon me but upon Martin.

I had some reason for this fear.

After my father's offer of a reward there came various spiteful paragraphs (inspired, as I thought, by Alma, and written by the clumsier hand of my husband) saying it was reported in Ellan that if my disappearance was to be accounted for on the basis of flight, the only "shock" I could have experienced must be a shock of conscience, rumor having for some time associated my name with that of a person who was not unknown in connection with antarctic exploration.

THE HUE AND CRY APPALS MARY.

It was terrible.

After a while I realized that not only my housemates, but all London was discussing my disappearance.

It was a rule of our boarding house that during certain hours of every day everybody should go out as if he had business to go to, and having nothing else to do I used to walk up and down the streets. In doing so I was compelled to pass certain news vendors' stalls, and I saw for several days that nearly every placard had something about "the missing peeress."

When this occurred I would walk quickly along the thoroughfare with a sense of being pursued and the feeling which a nervous woman has when she is going down a dark corridor at night—that noiseless footsteps are coming behind, and a hand may at any moment be laid on her shoulder.

But nobody troubled me in the streets, and the only person in our boarding house who seemed to suspect me was our landlady. She said nothing, but when my lip was quivering while the old Colonel read that cruel word about Martin I caught her little gray eyes looking askant at me.

One afternoon, her sister, the milliner, came to see me according to her promise, and though she, too, said nothing, I saw that, while the old Colonel and the old clergyman were disputing on the hearth rug about some disappearance which occurred thousands of years ago, she was looking fixedly at the fingers with which, in my nervousness, I was ruckling up the discolored chintz of my chair.

Then in a moment—I don't know why—it flashed upon me that my traveling companion was in correspondence with my father.

That idea became so insistent toward dinnertime that I made pretence of being ill (which was not very difficult) to retire to my room, where the cockney chambermaid wrung handkerchiefs out of vinegar and laid them on my forehead to relieve my headache—though she increased it, poor thing, by talking perpetually.

Next morning my landlady came up to say that if, as she assumed from my name, I was Irish and a Catholic, I might like to receive a visit from a Sister of Mercy who called at the house at intervals to attend to the sick.

A young woman stepped quietly into the room and closed the door behind her. She was wearing the blue and white habit of the Little Sisters of the Poor, but I knew her long, pale, pain-featured face in an instant.

A flood of shame and at the same time a flood of joy swept over me at the sight of her.

It was Mildred Bankes.

Identified!

"MARY," said Mildred, "speak low and tell me everything."

She sat in my chair, I knelt by her side, took one of her hands in both of mine, and told her.

I told her that I had fled from my husband's house because I could not bear to remain there any longer.

I told her that my father had me married against my will, in spite of my protests, when I was a child, and did not know that I had any right to resist him.

I told her that my father—God forgive me if I did him a wrong—did not love me, that he had sacrificed my happiness to his lust of power, and that if he were searching for me now it was only because my absence disturbed his plans and hurt his pride.

I told her that my husband did not love me either, and that he had married me from the basest motives, merely to pay his debts and secure an income.

I told her, too, that not only did my husband not love me, but he loved somebody else, that he had been cruel and brutal to me, and therefore (for these and other reasons) I could not return to him under any circumstances.

While I was speaking I felt Mildred's hand twitching between mine, and when I had finished she said, "But, my dear child, they told me your friends were broken-hearted about you; that you had lost your memory and perhaps your reason, and therefore it would be a good act to help them to send you home."

"It's not true, it's not true," I said.

And then in a low voice, as if afraid of being overheard, she told me how she came to be there—that the woman who had traveled with me in the train from Liverpool, seeing my father's offer of a reward, had written to him to say that she knew where I was and only needed somebody to establish my identity; that my father wished to come to London for this purpose, but had been forbidden by his doctor; that our parish priest, Father Donovan, had volunteered to come instead, but had been prohibited by his bishop, and finally that my father had written to his lawyers in London, and Father Dan to her, knowing that she and I had been together at the Sacred Heart in Rome, and that it was her work now to look after lost ones and send them safely back to their people.

"And now the lawyer and the doctor are down stairs," she said in a whisper, "and they are only waiting for me to say who you are that they may apply for an order to send you home."

This terrified me so much that I made a fervent appeal to Mildred to save me.

"Oh, Mildred, save me, save me," I cried.

"But how can I? How can I?" she asked.

I saw what she meant, and thinking to touch her still more deeply I told her the rest of my story.

I told her that if I had fled from my husband's house it was not merely because he had been cruel and brutal to me, but because I, too, loved somebody else—somebody who was far away but was coming back, and there was nothing I could not bear for him in the meantime, no pain or suffering or loneliness, and when he returned he would protect me from every danger, and we should love each other eternally.

FORBES URGES FULL INQUIRY ON FRISCO LINE

By B. C. FORBES.
Financial Editor of the American.

The latest scandal in American high finance grows worse on closer acquaintance. Nothing quite so bad has occurred in years. American credit abroad is in danger of being assassinated.

Let me assure the government that an investigation of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad, if it gets at the real, full facts, will disclose something worth the pains. I am not speaking at random.

The proposed probe by the Interstate Commerce Commission is imperatively demanded.

But there is a larger problem involved: The commission should have jurisdiction over receiverships; men who run a road to ruin should not have charge when the crash comes. Investors are entitled to protection.

Friendly receivers used to be appointed when banks failed, and depositors seldom got any satisfaction, the funds usually going into the pockets of the receivers, their lawyer friends and other

World Peace Plan Favored by Japan

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Ambassador Chinda of Japan has formally notified Secretary Bryan that Japan had accepted in principle the proposed plan advanced by the United States for universal peace.

hungry gentlemen during long-drawn-out, go-as-you-please, leave-me-alone proceedings.

To allow President Winchell and Director West of the Frisco system full sway in treating the thousands of investors who have been caught in disaster were fraught with danger, for it would stir up public antagonism, public distrust and public suspicion that could not fail to feed socialistic clamor.

I asked B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the Frisco road and its controlling power, a few plain, courteous questions yesterday, but he said he did not care to talk at this stage.

Reports were again plentiful in Wall Street. Speyer & Company's legal representative is due from St. Louis today and a statement revealing exactly what preceded the sudden appointment of receivers is expected. Friends of this old established banking firm are urging it to come forward with a full explanation showing how it was misled, how the management failed to fulfil certain pledges and how the application for receivership upset all previous calculations.

Speyer & Company, however, have so far made no official statement further than that they were not consulted about the appointment of receivers. Later the whole inside developments may be made known.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Stocks had a better tone and ranged higher this morning as a reaction from yesterday's slump. But the London market was nervous and erratic. Canadian Pacific broke to a new low there in early trading, but recovered and became buoyant. There was a better feeling towards Americans as the day progressed.

The Boston market was dull and the price movement sluggish. At the end of the first hour in New York Amalgamated, Reading and Union Pacific were higher, while Canadian Pacific was up 3. Steel was unchanged and Southern Pacific a shade higher. American Smelting at one time sold more than two points below yesterday's final quotation, but recovered part of the loss.

Canadian Pacific Opened Higher.

Strength in London gave Canadian Pacific a gain of 2⅞ at the opening of the New York market, although afterwards this issue lost part of its advance. However, it continued as a leader and practically dominated the sentiment felt toward all active securities.

The tone was nervous and uncertain. Reports that the slump in Canadian Pacific, which sent it to a new low level, nearly 70 points below its high record of last Summer, was caused by the constant calling of loans abroad gave way to the belief that, now that the Balkan war is over, the situation will steadily improve.

Among the declines here were Anaconda ⅝, Steel common ⅛, Utah Copper ¼, Southern Pacific ⅛, Missouri Pacific ⅜, Great Northern preferred ¼, American Smelting ¼.

Union Pacific advanced ⅜, and Southern Pacific recovered its loss and advanced. Fractional gains were also scored by Amalgamated and St. Paul. Steel sold fractionally above its low mark of yesterday, which was the furthest down its price it had been for many months.

The Curb was irregular.

Americans in London were improved, with Harrimans the most active.

Frisco Probe Under Criminal Law?

A Washington dispatch says the Interstate Commerce Commission will direct that both civil and criminal proceedings shall be brought against officials of the Frisco road should the investigation show that there has been any "crooked work" in connection with the wrecking of this railroad property.

Representative Hineburgh of Illinois offered a House resolution that Congress order the commission to investigate the affairs of the St. Louis & San Francisco road. The resolve must get through the Judiciary Committee to produce action.

Mr. Hineburgh said that mismanagement of the road is charged and in regard to his finances he remarked: "The stock of the road is $200,000,000. The outstanding stock is $49,998,262 and the bond issue is $320,312,448, with about $26,000,000 issued in France. The report of the company as to the earnings of the road show a gross in 1912 of $42,100,364, with net earnings of $12,992,318."

Currency Reserve Planned.

A suggestion has been made to the Banking and Currency Committee that a "national reserve division" be made a part of the Treasury Department and the Central Reserve Association, suggested by the National Monetary Commission and the Central Agency, favored by some Democratic leaders, be eliminated from plans. Under the "reserve division" scheme, reserve agencies would be established in each of the reserve cities which would receive and mobilize the reserves of national and other banks. Members of reserve associations would put out treasury gold notes as elastic currency, secured by the prime assets of banks accommodated, and make a market for prime commercial paper of such banks.

Gold certificates, greenbacks and national banknotes would be retired and a gigantic gold reserve built up to be used as a redemption fund for any notes issued by the Treasury in carrying out the plan. Gold available would be about $2,000,000,000, a basis for twice that amount of Treasury notes.

Meat and Flour Off Free List?

It is stated that meats and flour will not go on the free list in the Democratic tariff law if the recommendation of the Senate Finance Sub-Committee, in charge of the agricultural schedule is accepted.

It was decided, in carrying out the determination to perfect the Underwood bill by equalizing raw materials and their products, that it would be wiser to levy nominal duties on meats and flour products than to put live stock and grain on the free list.

In accordance with this decision the sub-committee, in revising the schedule, took from the free list in the House bill fresh meats—beef, mutton and pork—and made them dutiable at 10 per cent. ad valorem.

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market had an easy tone at the opening, spot and futures each being off 5s.

Copper selling is of small volume and quotations are merely nominal. Big producers are asking 15⅞ cents a pound, but some small ones and some dealers are making concessions when they have a chance to dispose of metal. The decrease of the European visible supply reported yesterday had little influence in the trade.

The Douglas smelter of the Calumet & Arizona Mining Co. has been blown in and will be in full operation, it is said, two months ahead of schedule time. It has 2,400 tons daily capacity and cost $2,000,000.

For May the Franklin output was 304,000 pounds of mineral, compared with 336,000 in April and 380,000 in May, 1912.

Financial News in Brief.

Stockholders of fifty-three American railroad, industrial and public utility corporations yesterday received dividend checks for a total of $14,920,199, or about $2,500,000 more than on the same day last year.

Adams Express Company's receipts for February decreased $193,609, increasing the operating deficit by $130,980.

Pere Marquette Railroad receivers will spend $1,000,000 to construct an eighteen-mile line.

The Pennsylvania Railroad announces completion of the subscriptions to its new capital stock, worth at par $45,387,800.

Hayden, Stone & Co. announce that the Pond Creek stockholders have subscribed for the entire issue of 6 per cent. first mortgage convertible bonds, leaving none for the underwriters.

May gross earnings of the Boston Elevated show an increase of $60,000, or 4½ per cent., as compared with the corresponding 1912 month.

Standard Oil of Kentucky has declared an initial dividend of $5 a share.

The slump in stocks yesterday caused the suspension of Dessain & Dutton of London, jobbers in Argentine rails. It was reported yesterday that one house was in trouble there.

May sales by Sears-Roebuck show an increase over the corresponding month last year of 13.45 per cent. This company has declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share.

The Bank of Germany's weekly report shows that cash on hand decreased 66,007,000 marks. The decrease in gold was 23,581,000.

The Boston & Maine total operating revenue increased $118,143 in April, but net decreased $162,287. There was a decrease of $160,475 in operating income. Operating expenses increased $280,430 and taxes $6,130. From July 1 to April 30, total operating revenue increased $2,831,816 and operating expenses $2,425,527. The decrease in net operating revenue was $93,711 and in operating income $154,991.

The New York sub-treasury gained $1,272,000 from banks yesterday and has gained $2,932,000 since Friday.

Free Ship Treaties Can Be Annulled

We are told from Washington that the reason the President is willing to have the five per cent. discrimination in favor of American shipping left out of the tariff bill is that it is contrary to some two-score treaties with foreign nations.

The most important of these is that with Great Britain, whose protest has already been made. That treaty is ninety-eight years old, and could have been terminated AT ANY TIME SINCE 1828 on giving ONE YEAR'S NOTICE.

The real treaty which covers the subject was made in 1815, and was for four years only. In 1818 it was renewed for ten years. In 1827 it was renewed indefinitely, but with a most definite clause looking to its annulment after twelve months' notice should either country so desire.

So far, therefore, as Great Britain is concerned, an American merchant marine is being throttled by a treaty made with the sailing ships, methods, trade routes, conditions and prejudices in view which controlled the situation nearly a hundred years ago. A study of that treaty is instructive.

Perhaps the State Department will now enlighten the country on the origin and details OF THE OTHER TREATIES which are keeping the American flag off the seas. If they are no more difficult to re-adjust or dispose of than this ancient British treaty, they certainly impose no great or lasting obstacle to constructive legislation. Here, indeed, would appear to be a splendid opportunity for Secretary Bryan and his Department of State.

Nearly a century and a quarter ago Thomas Jefferson said: "For a navigating people to purchase its marine afloat would be a strange speculation, as the marine would always be dependent upon the merchants furnishing them." In the last few days the London newspapers have printed a list of colliers or other transport vessels JUST CHARTERED THERE by the United States Government!

Free Trade Great Britain has always protected its shipping and does so today in various ways. The Lusitania and Mauretania were built with $13,000,000 advanced by the British Government at a very low rate of interest and on easy terms of repayment. In addition, the Cunard line draws admiralty and mail subsidies for twenty years at the rate of above $1,000,000 a year. Even Mr. Gladstone's code of morals on the question of protection spoiled in salt water, for under his premiership was made the hugely profitable Government contract with the Peninsular & Oriental line running to India, although the English line was underbid by a French line. Both Adam Smith and John Stuart Mill indorsed the stringent navigation laws by which Great Britain almost cornered the carrying trade of the world.

The vessels engaged in doing our foreign carrying earn $300,000,000 a year. During the NEXT TWENTY YEARS BETWEEN SIX AND SEVEN MILLIONS OF TONS OF SHIPS WILL BE BUILT SOMEWHERE to carry the imports and exports of this country, if there is no increase. The earnings of these ships during their twenty years of life will approximate nine billions of dollars, nearly all of which will go to foreign ship owners, if conditions remain unchanged.

Are conditions to remain unchanged because treaties that can be adjusted or terminated at twelve months notice are to be regarded as inviolable antiques?

The Panama Canal Dispute as Seen from Afar

"He deceives himself grievously who believes the United States made the stupendous sacrifice of human energy and public money necessary to build the Panama Canal, 'the greatest liberty man has ever taken with Nature,' with any other purpose in view than the national advantage of the United States—commercial, and, above all, political advantage."

This is the opening sentence in a remarkably clear monograph that George C. Butte has wrtten on "Great Britain and the Panama Canal." He penned this work at Heidelberg, Germany, on "neutral" ground, that he might remain "uninfluenced by local sentiment."

He continues:

"No more fundamental error is commended generally by those defending the British view on the present controversy than appears in the following statement of the Government's protest: 'The Hay-Pauncefote treaty does not stand alone. It was the corollary of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty of 1850.'

"The Hay-Pauncefote treaty contains five articles, and the very first article unconditionally abrogates the treaty of 1850.

"From the standpoint of abstract justice the contention of Great Britain that she should be put on the same footing as respects the use and enjoyment of the Panama Canal as the United States seems presumptuous. The restriction which she invokes against the sovereign right of the United States to enact legislation affecting its internal affairs must appear in express language in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

"No mere implication or argumentative deduction will suffice. And if we adopt the rule Lord Clarendon applied against the United States in construing the Clayton-Bulwer treaty in the case of the Mosquito Indians, to the effect that 'the true construction of a treaty must be deduced from the literal meaning of the words employed in the framing,' it will be hard, indeed, for Great Britain to prove her claims."

How Would You Like to Take Color Baths?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

I KNOW a lady who cannot endure the color red. She says it hurts her eyes to look at it. More than that, she declares that it almost turns her sick if she is compelled to see it for a considerable time.

But blue delights her, and gives her an indefinite sense of inward pleasure. She is not fond of yellow, either, but all shades of blue, green or violet are delightful to her. She likes to have them about her, and avers that they stimulate her nervous system and make her mentally brighter and more cheerful.

All Have Preferences or Prejudices in Colors

All of us have similar, though less pronounced, preferences or prejudices about colors, sometimes without being fully aware of the fact, because we have never analyzed our feelings about them. I, myself, like nearly all colors, but my favorites are a bright red, a rich yellow and a deep blue, so that they extend nearly from one end of the spectrum to the other. If I were compelled to make an absolute choice I should probably select some shade of blue.

Now, there is reason for thinking that this question of color preference possesses an importance far greater than shows on the surface. It may deeply affect our physical and mental well-being.

Some think that it is merely a matter of artistic temperament or training, but it strikes deeper than that. It is a matter of sensitiveness to vibration, and recent discoveries show that vibration, in one form or another, lies at the basis of all physical existence.

The nervous system is a vibratory engine of almost unimaginable sensitiveness. It governs the body and all the manifestations of the mind through the brain. Every different color is a different vibration affecting the nerves. If you have a horror of red, like the lady of whom I have spoken, it is because your nervous system is not attuned to vibrations of light having wave lengths so great as one forty-thousandth of an inch. Your brain is something like a wireless receiver, keyed to short waves, which is confused by the impact of waves of relatively great length. The blue waves please you, and are agreeable to your sense because their vibratory length does not exceed about one fifty-five-thousandth of an inch, and such oscillations are congenial to you.

Neither Red Nor Blue Waves Have any Color in Themselves

But neither the red waves nor the blue ones have any color in themselves. The color is simply a particular impression in the brain, made by a particular number of vibrations per second striking upon the optic nerve. All the light waves move forward at the same speed, and if they all had the same length there would be only one color.

Short Light Waves Strike Faster on Eye Than Long Ones.

But the short ones strike faster on the eye than the long ones, and the consequence is that they produce an impression which we call blue, while the others produce an impression which we call red.

Colors resemble musical notes. Four hundred and twenty-eight million-million light waves striking the eye per second produce the color red; sixty-four waves of sound striking the ear per second produce the note C-1; 634 million-million light waves striking the eye per second produce the color blue; 256 waves of sound striking the ear per second produce the note C-3. And so each so-called color, and each so-called musical note, is nothing but a special kind of impression on the brain made by vibrations of a special frequency.

If you can hurry up the vibrations of either light or sound so that the same waves strike more frequently you will change the color, or the note, as the case may be. If the light waves which cause pain to the lady who detests the "color" red, could be made to enter her eye at the rate of 634 million-million per second instead of only 428 million-million, she would be delighted by seeing her favorite "color" blue—and yet the waves, as waves, would be the same in both cases.

Since the sensations which we call colors are thus proved to be simply the effect of particular frequencies of vibration affecting the nerves, it seems evident that there must be a physiology (vital science), of color, the study of which might prove of great benefit to humanity. It has already been proved that certain light waves have a wonderful effect upon living things, such as plants and some of the lower animals, and the well-known Finsen rays (which are simply the waves of ultra-violet light), are capable of eradicating some diseases of the human skin. There have been experiments which seemed to indicate that "baths" of blue light may have a stimulating effect upon the nervous system of some persons.

If a real science could be built up about this subject it might be possible to find the vibration frequencies that were most congenial to different individuals, and thus to develop a valuable system of color bathing that would be a boon to humanity.

When the Doc Speaks to the Girls

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

THERE'S a murmur in the class room, there's a flutter in the frat;
As the eager misses wonder how they'll look in this or that.
Fled are thoughts of "proms," and dances, dips and tangos are forgot;
Banished—for at least a fortnight—is the dear old turkey trot.
And throughout the seminary voices musically repeat:
"Won't it just be grand to see him? Isn't he the cutest sweet?"
So they wait with wild impatience, in their loveliest array,
Till they hear the Doc address them on their graduation day!

Up the driveway rolls a motor, and the girls in furious glee
Shout (correctly) all together, "Goody! Goody! It is he!"
Hand in hand they circle round him with their cultivated grace,
While he looks upon them brightly with his gentle, kindly face.
And a cheer like liquid silver echoes sweetly through the air
As he takes his new silk hat off and reveals his baldish hair.
For not Faversham nor Hackett—no, not even Edward Bok,
So delights the dear young ladies as their good old friend the Doc.

What to him is dreary statecraft—let the hands take care of that—
When these young hearts all are beating with a welcoming pitter pat?
What are protocols and papers which assistants bid "Sign here!"
When these shining morning faces speak soft praises in one's ear?
Gaily now they gather round him while the minutes hurry fast,
And he's thrilled as he discovers that he's found his job at last!
Happy Doc! More happy maidens! How their hearts leap! Well they may!
When they hear the Doc address them on their graduation day!

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

THANKS FROM BABIES' HOSPITAL.

Massachusetts Babies'
Hospital.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—In behalf of the directors I want to thank you for your courtesy in helping this institution in its preparation for the pageant given at the Lars Anderson estate in Brookline on Tuesday, which proved of great value and which we all thoroughly appreciate.

As the weather proved rather unfavorable, our receipts netted about $3,000 only, which was less than we had hoped for, but we shall continue to work towards raising the $10,000 needed, and trust we may succeed in doing so.

Yours very truly,
SYDNEY M. WILLIAMS.

MUST HAVE SHIPS TO MAKE NATION AND HONOR SAFE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Why do not the United States wake up? It seems so much like the fairy tale of the sleeping beauty, but, believe me, the awakening will not be a happy one unless our navy, through its high officials, does not bring its influence to bear upon the very vital question of more men-o'-war to meet the demand that is sure to come from those who would dare demand of us a change of laws to suit their whim.

What is Uncle Sam thinking of? From the War of the Revolution up to the present there has not been a smirch on the national pride and honor of our nation, and to let a nation of erstwhile heathens gain the lands we have fought and bled for makes it harder if the United States continues in her hypnotic state of inertia.

I am a descendant of old Revolutionary stock and the daughter of one who helped cut the cancer of darkness from the South and led her into glorious beauty and equality.

Please try and do something. I am only a woman. I do not believe in votes for my sex, unless it would be of value in a crisis like the present. I am,

A FAITHFUL DAUGHTER OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.
